Stock Control Bill Demand By Roosevelt Wins Backers

Administration, Black Fall in Line After Action Demand.

Brain Trust Is Hit As "Communistic"

Gary Educator Asserts Young Element to Seek a "Stalin."

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration yesterday swung into line behind the revised Fletcher-Rayburn stock market control bill, as President Roosevelt said he wanted a bill with "teeth in it," and Gov. Eugene Black announced the Federal Reserve Board's unqualified support.

At the same time, industry opened attack on a new front, Chairman James H. Rand, jr., of the Committee for the Nation, charging the bill was written "by a group of radical young lawyers, who hold no elective office."

Quoting from a letter attributed to Dr. William A. Wirt, head of the Gary (Ind.) school system, Mr. Rand alleged "a group of theoretically trained young men, sincere but inexperienced," are directing the country along "the road to communism."

The Wirt letter quoted a member of the group referred to as "the brain trusters" as saying:

Roosevelt No Stalin.

"We believe we have Mr. Roosevelt in the middle of a swift stream, and that the current is so strong that he can not turn back or escape from it. We believe that we can keep Mr. Roosevelt there until we are ready to supplant him with a Stalin. We all think that Mr. Roosevelt is only the Kerensky of this revolution."

The President's statement he wanted a bill "with teeth" in it followed a similar expression Thursday by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. Mr. Roosevelt made clear, however, that he has not yet read the revised stock market bill now pending before the House and Senate committee.

Gov. Black appeared before both the House Interstate Commerce and the Senate Banking committees.

"It is the feeling of the Federal Reserve Board," he said, "that the revised bill is workable, is right in principle, and will accomplish the purpose of regulating National securities exchanges under fair practices and that undue and excessive speculation will be properly curbed and the undue use of credit in speculation be prevented."

In this connection, the Reserve Board head asked a dual extension

Arrest Reveals Rumanian Plot

Former Queen Helen's Friend Held; Premier Intended Victim.

Bucharest, Rumania, March 23 (AP).—A close friend of former Queen Helen, Prof. Gomoju, was arrested today on charges that he planned to assassinate Premier George Tatarescu and other government officials.

The authorities said the professor, one of the leading physicians of the country, had sent threatening letters to Tatarescu, various other members of the administration and a number of influential people.

It was revealed that high official circles had been in a state of near panic during the investigation of the plot and the arrest caused a sensation because of the fact that the trial of Iron Guardists accused of the murder of the late Premier Ion Duca is under way.

Marius Constantinescu, president of the Medical Students Association, was arrested tonight in connection with the general inquiry into terrorist agitation.

Bettors Find Both Have Royal Flush

Freak Deal Builds Big Pot at Annapolis.

Annapolis, Md., March 23 (U.P.).—Experts can sharpen their pencils and figure out the percentages for this:

Last night in an eight-handed draw poker game two of the players, David S. Jenkins, publisher of the Evening Capital, and Carey L. Merdith, capitalist, held royal flushes. They divided the pot.

Jenkins and Merdith raised each other until all their chips, as well as those of the other six players, were in the pot.

The winners wrote a short history of their hands and kept them. Jenkins had a club flush and Merdith one in hearts.

Brokers Protest Grain Trade Tax By First Walkout

Chicago, March 23 (AP).—The strike idea spread to the brokerage business today and wheat traders at the Board of Trade, the world's largest grain market, indulged in a brief walkout in protest against high taxes.

For about three minutes in the middle of a trading day, the wheat pit, largest on the floor, was empty.

The odd maneauver, repeated just before the market closed, was a spontaneous protest against the scarcity of business, which grain men ascribe to the tax of 5 cents a $100 of valuation on trades. This tax was fixed a year ago, and represented a five-fold increase.

The walkout ended when a few orders dribbled in and soon the pit refilled. Trading, however, resumed its normal dullness. The walkout was unprecedented.

Brandt Barred From Offices For AAA Attack

Calls Wallace 'Unreliable;' May Face Demand to Prove Charges.

(Associated Press.)

The Farm Administration may ask John Brandt, president of the Land o' Lakes Creamery, of Minneapolis, to prove at a formal hearing charges he made against Secretary Wallace.

Meanwhile, in the absence of the Secretary of Agriculture, his indignant assistants have barred Brandt from the Department of Agriculture and the Farm Administration. He was informed he would not be welcomed unless he retracted statements about Wallace or apologized.

Back of the furore is dissatisfaction by some cooperative officials with the Administration's milk policies. Secretary Wallace was expected to return to Washington last night.

Calls Wallace "Unreliable."

Brandt said before representatives of dairy cooperative marketing associations called to draft a protest against the Administration milk policies, that Wallace was "unreliable," and had failed to carry out an agreement to purchase butter bought by Land o' Lakes to stabilize the market.

The Farm Administration denied the charges in a statement which declared that the company was paid $11,085.53 in addition to the cost of the butter to cover overhead expenses and added that the company "agreed to handle the transactions without profit."

Officials declared they would consider further payment if Brandt would submit an itemized statement of expenditures but that so far he had failed to do so.

Policies Assailed.

Other repercussions to claims made by representatives attending the conference included a denial sent to Secretary Wallace from a California Milk Producers Association that Roy M. Pike, of Oakland, Calif., represented Western dairy interests.

Pike Wednesday attacked farm officials and said he would seek the removal of a group which had a record of "broken pledges, shifting policies and surrender to chiseling minorities."

The cooperative conference meanwhile drew up resolutions for submission to Congress.

The resolutions assailed the Administration's latest milk policy of setting only producers' prices and the proposed production control plan.

Three Men Killed As Truck Overturns

Roanoke, Va., March 23 (AP).—Three men were killed when the light truck in which they were riding crashed into a culvert abutment and turned over into a ditch on Lee highway, 18 miles west of Roanoke, yesterday.

The dead, all of whom reside near Elliston, are: Monroe Starkey, 41; Thomas W. Starkey, 21, a son; T Dowell King, about 43.

5-5 Pay Plan Likely to Pass Senate Today

Split on Veteran Benefits Keeps Offices Bill's Fate in Doubt.

Approval of the House "five-and-five" Government pay restoration plan will be given by the Senate today, it was predicted yesterday by Senate leaders, including Senator Robinson (Arkansas), majority leader.

The "five-and-five" plan provides for restoration of 5 per cent of Government salaries as of February 1 and another 5 per cent effective July 1 and authorizes the President to restore the remaining third of the 15 per cent pay slash, if living costs rise to 1928 levels or above, by next January 1.

Salaries over $6,000 a year, however, will continue to suffer the full 15 per cent cut now in effect under provisions of the amendment sponsored by Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho.

Despite the apparent imminence of agreement on the question of Government pay, the independent offices bill faces a doubtful future because of provisions increasing benefits to veterans with the Borah amendment an added factor.

Urge New Conference.

Facing threats of a Presidential veto of even the reduced House benefits provisions, supporters of increased benefits in the Senate are prepared to accept the House reductions. They plan to ask the bill be sent to conference once again, in an effort to work out acceptable phraseology about the effect of which there is dispute.

Action on the measure was prevented yesterday by debate on other subjects. Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, who had charge of the bill, moved the Senate disagree to the House amendments after approval had been given to those sections of the conference report on which the House and Senate had agreed. That motion will be pending when the Senate convenes at noon today.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, who led the successful fight for full restoration of pay in the Senate, plans to move that the Senate recede from its full pay restoration and agree to the House 5-and-5 plan. He predicted his motion will be adopted. Senator Robinson, party leader, also predicted approval of the prospective McCarran motion.

Steiwer Adamant.

Senator Steiwer (Republican), of Oregon, who has been leader of the fight for increased benefits for veterans, is expected to move that the Senate disagree to the House veterans' amendments and ask for another conference.

"I believe the Senate majority is ready to accept the House provisions on veterans," the Senator said. "We want the measure sent back to conference, however, so that we can make what we believe necessary changes in phraseology which will clarify and bring the language within the scope of the intent of the House when it was adopted."

Senator Robinson and others said

Uruguayan Envoy To U. S. Resigns

Montevideo, Uruguay, March 23 (AP).—The Uruguayan government today accepted the resignation of Dr. Jacobo Varela, Uruguayan Minister to the United States and "subdean" of the Diplomatic Corps in Washington.

Dr. Varela has represented Uruguay in Washington since May 12, 1920, and has served there longer than the head of any other diplomatic mission.

The government appointed Jose Richling, Uruguayan Consul-General in New York, as acting minister.

Bullets Puncture Mail Plane, Three Youths Arrested

Clay, W. Va., March 23 (Spl.).—Charged with shooting holes in an Army mail plane as it droned above a still in a remote section of Clay County, three youths were arrested by State Troopers H. B. Kidd and Ezra Zirkle, of the Sutton Detachment, today.

The prisoners, registered as Fred Ward, 20; Noble Ward, 22, and Roma Nottingham, 23, were taken to the county jail.

According to the police, the three youths used their rifles in the belief the plane contained prohibition officers.

Revised Mail Bill Permits Lines to Sue

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Private airline operators whose mail contracts were canceled last month would be authorized to press any claims which they may wish to bring against the Government in the Court of Claims under a revised air-mail bill introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee.

The new bill, which retains the underlying principle of awarding air-mail contracts after competitive bidding of the first measure, however, meets many of the objections raised against the latter by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Clarence Chamberlin and Eddie Rickenbacker, noted fliers, and others appearing before the Senate Postoffice and Post Roads Committee.

Although there has been sharp criticism of the plan to pay for transportation of the mail on a space-mileage basis, rather than on a poundage basis, this feature of the legislation was left unchanged. So were the rates of compensation —30 cents per mile for the first 300 pounds of mail or fraction thereof and 8 cents per mile for each additional 200 pounds or fraction thereof. These rates were criticized as too low.

Ignore O'Mahoney Plan.

Senator McKellar introduced the new bill on behalf of himself and Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama. The latter has charge of the air-mail contract inquiry. They apparently were unimpressed by the plan of four Democrats on the Postoffice committee, led by Senator O'Mahoney, Wyoming, to abandon competitive bidding for air mail and place it on the same basis as transportation of mail by railroads.

The most important concession made by the two Senators was that giving the mail contractors the right to sue the Government in the Court of Claims. This took the place of a provision in the first bill which required all bidders for new contracts to waive any claims they had

Dr. Wynekoop to Move For New Trial Today

Chicago, March 23 (AP).—On the eve of another court appearance, Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, convicted as the slayer of her daughter-in-law Rheta, tonight expressed hope that she would secure a new trial and vindication.

She is to appear before Criminal Court Judge Harry B. Miller tomorrow to hear his verdict on a motion for a new trial, and in the event it is overruled hear him formally sentence her to 25 years imprisonment as recommended by the jury.

Bandits Take $26,000 In Bank Truck Hold-up

Police said four or five bandits participated.

Job Insurance Bill Backed By President

Passage This Session Is Asked of Congress by Roosevelt.

Swope Urges Caution in Enactment of Costly Labor Measure.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Declaring that unemployment insurance would become "a stabilizing device in our economic structure," President Roosevelt yesterday indorsed the general principles of the Wagner-Lewis bill and urged its enactment at this session of Congress.

In a letter to Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee the President pointed out he has been a long-time advocate of unemployment insurance "as an essential part of our program to build a more ample and secure life."

Recognizing it as no panacea for major depressions, he still considered it "a method of retarding the rapid downward spiral curve" by maintaining purchasing during intermittent unemployment. Other benefits should include the relief of public and private charity from a burden he believes unjust.

Business Fearful of Cost.

This sweeping approval of a bill which few had thought stood much chance for passage by this Congress, despite the impetus of "liberal" elements both within and outside the Administration, vastly improved its prospect. However, it has still to survive the expected onslaught by business, fearful of its cost.

Mr. Roosevelt's answer to the committee's inquiry of his opinion came as Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co., was urging it to go slow in the enactment of a bill which Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins has estimated would add $1,000,000,000 annually to the employers' pay rolls. Business should have more time to recover, he held, before being called upon to set up unemployment reserves.

The Wagner-Lewis bill would promote the establishment of State systems of unemployment insurance by allowing deduction from a 5 per cent Federal excise tax on pay rolls of whatever is paid into State or company insurance sinking funds.

Thus, the States would be free to set up whatever types of unemployment reserves they might desire, provided they meet standards of the Government. This feature of the bill the President specifically indorsed as fulfilling the Democratic platform pledge for unemployment insurance by State, rather than National, laws.

The President's Letter.

The President's letter to Doughton, in which he enumerated provisions he believed advantageous in the bill, follows in part:

"I need not tell you that for a long time I have advocated unem-

Boy Stowaway, 12, Deported by U. S.

Came From England Free, and Still Traveling.

Norfolk, Va., March 23 (Spl.).—When the Oriole Line steamer Artigas left Norfolk tonight she had on board, besides her crew of 34, a boy who crossed the Atlantic from Liverpool and was ordered deported by the immigration authorities at Boston.

Johnny Dunn is just 12 years old, but he wanted to see the world and selected America as the first place to visit.

While the Artigas was loading at Liverpool February 28, Johnny went on board and concealed himself in the hold. He had about a half-pound of cheese, some candy and a bag of biscuits. Being unaccustomed to the sea, Johnny became seasick when the vessel was just a day out of port, and was discovered.

Auto Industry Cuts Hours, Raises Wages

Detroit, March 23 (U.P.).—The automobile industry's attempts to outmaneuver the American Federation of Labor and avert a general walkout of 100,000 workers, took a dramatic turn today when it was revealed that manufacturers were putting into effect a pay increase and reduction in hours for all classifications of production men.

General Motors, the largest employers outside the Ford system, was the first to make the bold bid for support by the vast body of "independent" workers who thus far have not become affiliated with the A. F. of L. They were followed, in rapid succession, by Chrysler and other members of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Tonight, 90 per cent of the manufacturers, exclusive of Ford, had offered their men a 36-hour week, with pay increases sufficient to give them, each pay day, the same salary they received under the 40-hour week. It was significant that in the Washington conferences, labor had not asked for those advantages.

The move was regarded in most circles as an obvious attempt to wean workers away from the American Federation. No one can say definitely, not even the labor

U. S. May Lend Millions to Aid Slum Removal

President Reveals Plan to Expand Clearance Projects in 1934.

Following a disclosure that the Administration is studying means to release new millions for public works through RFC loans to cities, President Roosevelt said yesterday that the Federal Government stands ready to promote slum clearance on a much larger scale during the coming year.

In order "to make public works money go as far as possible," Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the RFC, said, after a White House conference, that a plan is being considered whereby the RFC would advance funds to municipalities so they might obtain grants from the Public Works Administration.

Heretofore the PWA has been both lending money to cities and authorizing grants for 30 per cent of actual construction. Under the plan now being studied, the RFC would assume much of the demand for loans and thus leave the PWA with more funds to encourage municipal public works.

Loans would be made only to "solvent cities," Mr. Jones stressed, adding that no decision has been reached. He indicated a belief that many cities are holding up bond issues because of market conditions, and this plan would enable the RFC to accept bonds as the basis for loans.

The RFC still is considering loans on municipal tax anticipatory warrants, but that was not discussed in the conference, attended also by Public Works Administrator Ickes and Relief Administrator Hopkins, Mr. Jones said.

Revealing that the Administra-

White House Refuses Help To Candidates

"Hands-Off" Policy Reply to Reported Aid in Local Fights.

By Raymond Clapper.

The White House officially declared hands-off for all political party contests yesterday.

The statement was issued to apply not only generally to the nominating primaries which are now warming up, but also to specific reports that President Roosevelt was about to participate in the scalping of John F. Curry, chieftain of Tammany Hall.

It also was intended to take the President out of a real old-fashioned Texas rodeo in which Senator Tom Connally is seeking renomination against Representative Joe Bailey, who wants to move over to the Senate where his father once served.

Both Connally and Bailey had made statements which, read with the aid of rose-colored glasses, might seem to imply they had the private sympathy of the White House.

Senator Connally, shortly before formally announcing his candidacy yesterday, called at the White House. He said afterward he had conferred about several matters, and added:

"I have no desire to involve the President in local or state politics and am perfectly content for the people of Texas to pass judgment on my services in the Senate.

"Were the matter to be decided by President Roosevelt, I should likewise be entirely content and would have no fear of the outcome."

Now, you could cross-question Senator Connally for hours about

Insull Agent in Egypt Guides Fugitive to Refuge by Radio

Port Said, Egypt, March 23 (AP).—An agent for Samuel Insull was believed tonight to be in Egypt directing the fugitive financier's maneuvers toward a safe refuge.

This theory and another that the former utilities executive was remaining aboard the Greek freighter Maiotis at sea, pending receipt of advice from the land representative regarding the wisest course to steer, were advanced by the wireless officer of the Greek steamer Attiki.

The officer acted as the wireless intermediary between the Maiotis and an Alexandria station. He said that while he was in direct contact with Alexandria a ship representing herself as the Maiotis asked if there were any messages for her.

The reply was negative. The wireless operator said that once Alexandria and the Maiotis established contact the freighter advised the Attiki her aid was no longer needed.

Nevertheless, the officer said he listened in and heard the Maiotis ask for messages and give a clew as to her position—about 150 miles from this Suez Canal gateway, 20 hours' steaming distance.

Port police said as long as the 74-year-old fugitive remained aboard his "yacht" he could not be seized here, unless Greece granted a permit for his arrest, since the Maiotis is considered Greek territory.

More Snow and Sleet Today As March Lion Roars Here

A belated March lion roared through the District yesterday and last night, carpeting the city with 2 inches of snow and sending the mercury to 18 degrees, one of the coldest March 23 readings on record.

The Weather Bureau gave no hope of a let-up in the unseasonable cold wave, which extends along the Atlantic Coast from Florida to Maine, and issued a prediction of sleet and snow for this morning.

Six hundred employes of the City Refuse Department were ordered out at 6 p. m. yesterday and 60 trucks were employed to help clear streets of snow. Two hours earlier, 200 employes of the City Sewer Department started to work.

Although snow made the streets and pavements treacherous, few traffic accidents were reported here. On the Washington-Richmond highway, however, traffic was tied up for nearly an hour when a van skidded at Woods Bridge, 14 miles south of Alexandria, blocking the road.

Mrs. Rufus Lusk, 28, of the 1700 block of Thirty-seventh street northwest, fractured her left hip when she fell in the 1400 block of Wisconsin avenue northwest, police said. She was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

After his automobile struck a parked car at Twelfth and Q streets northwest, skidded across the street into a patrol box, knocking it over, Edward Markand was held by police for driving with an expired permit. He gave his address as Brentwood, Md.

In New York the mercury dropped to 11 degrees, lowest mark recorded for the day in the 75 years in which the Weather Bureau has been operating there. In Boston the temperature was 6 degrees below zero, coldest March 23 on record.

Storm warnings were issued from Sandy Hook to Cape Hatteras. A disturbance was reported developing rapidly over the southern Appalachian region in conjunction with high pressure to the Northeast. These circumstances, officials announced, will cause strong northeast winds, probably reaching gale proportions on the coast.

Labor Chiefs Say Truce Will Go On

By Felix Bruner.

The combined efforts of President Roosevelt and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson again yesterday failed to bring settlement of the controversy between automobile manufacturers and their employes.

Conferences were held at both NRA headquarters and at the White House, but in neither did manufacturers and labor representatives meet together.

Following the White House conferences, which lasted until 8 p. m., it was indicated that both sides would await a further call of the President. Gen. Johnson, who attended all the meetings, said he hoped for some settlement today.

The labor representatives went from the White House to the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor, from which they sent telegrams to their local unions advising a continuance of the strike truce. They discussed the day's developments, but indicated no decisive action would be taken until after further conferences with the President or Johnson, or both.

Rail Peace Work Progresses.

Meanwhile, efforts to settle the wage differences between the railroads and the railroad unions continued with Joseph B. Eastman, railroad coordinator, as arbiter. It was announced that railroad representatives had seceded somewhat from their previous stand and had accepted a Government proposal in principle. Eastman expects to meet with the workers today. The nature of the proposal was not disclosed, and Eastman said he did not know how soon a settlement could be expected.

Automobile labor leaders said that "substantial progress" had been made in their controversy. They made the same report following conferences at the White House Thursday. Automobile manufacturers refused any comment.

Gen. Johnson met with manufacturers and Assistant Secretary of Coast Guard Saves 14 Men

Two Craft Grounded as Terrific Gale Lashes Virginia Coast.

Norfolk, Va., March 23 (Spl.).—Fourteen men, the crews of two vessels, were rescued by Coast Guardsmen this morning when the terrific northeaster, accompanied by sleet, struck the Virginia-North Carolina coast.

The Nova Julia, a trawler, was stranded off Currituck, N. C., and the auxiliary schooner Charlotte grounded off Fenwick Island. Although the Nova Julia struck the beach not more than 350 yards off shore, seas were running so high that it was impossible for the Coast Guard crews to launch surf boats and the rescues were made with breeches-buoys.

The Nova Julia was bound for Norfolk. The rescued crew gave their names as Leo Favoloro, master of Gloucester, Mass.; Edward Fox and Joe Brown, of Norfolk; Serafino Favoloro, Seraphino Ballobola, John Cook, Eany Taro, Andrew Tarrinelo, Josef Taro, and Josef Randaccon, all of Gloucester.

Shipping in Hampton Roads is at a standstill and traffic on Norfolk's streets is seriously handicapped. The wind attained a velocity of 58 miles an hour at Cape Hatteras and 42 at Cape Henry.

A number of ships remained at anchor, awaiting fair weather and other ships put in, seeking a haven from the storm.

At Hampton, Va., a number of small fishing boats were reported washed high on the beach. The Coast Guard is keeping three of its fastest cutters ready to answer calls for assistance.

Senate Plans World Court DecisionSoon

Robinson Says Present Session to Pass on Taking Up Issue.

A definite announcement on whether the World Court issue will be considered at this session of Congress may be expected in a few days, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, promised last night.

Earlier in the day American adherence to the court was urged before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by 30 witnesses representing legal, religious, political and business organizations throughout the country.

Included in the pleas addressed to the committee was a letter from Alfred E. Smith, declaring that "in these disturbed and threatening times, we should certainly do our part towards persuading all civilized nations to compose their differences by reason and law instead of by force."

Spokesmen for bar associations, chambers of commerce and churches pressed on committee members, who included Senator William E. Borah, the need for Senate raitification at this session of three protocols which would lead this country into the court.

To Hear Foes Later.

Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, opened the hearing by denying the committee had been "forced" to reopen World Court discussions, and said opponents of American adherence would be heard at a later date.

Clarence E. Martin, former president of the American Bar Association, acting as chairman of the groups urging ratification then marshaled an impressive array of witnesses, who testified briefly and presented memorials.

The committee appeared most impressed by the Smith letter, in which the former Democratic standard-bearer wrote to Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War:

"I greatly regret that I can not appear at the hearing on the World Court protocol on March 23.

"I can only repeat at this time what I have often said before, and that is that I am strongly in favor of the United States joining the permanent Court of International Justice * * *.

Both Parties Pledged.

"The major political parties have advocated adherence to the World Court for a number of years. The Democratic National convention definitely pledged the Democratic party to adherence to the court in 1932, and the Republican and Socialist parties promised the same thing in their National platforms of that year. As far back as 1926, the Senate voted, by an overwhelming majority, to join the court with certain reservations. The proposal made back in 1926 should now be adopted without further delay, so that the United States may take its proper part and lend its full support to the establishment of the rule by reason and neighborliness in international affairs."

Carrie Chapman Catt, who was instrumental in bringing about the hearing, told the committee:

"The world needs just now a few gestures toward peace, instead of so many in the direction of war.

"Congress has been bound up in problems of recovery from the last war and preparation for the next."

Harriman for Adherence.

Henry L. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said his organization had "consistently urged" adherence.

"We believe it would be wise at this time for the United States to adhere to the court in the interests of world peace," Harriman declared.

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, former president of the Federal Council of Churches, presented a "Memorial on World Peace."

"We support acceptance of the Root protocol, which 38 nations have ratified," Dr. Cadman declared.

The "deliberate judgment" of the American Bar Association that National welfare requires the United States to join the court was voiced by Martin.

Resolutions of 16 State Legislatures, which in the past year have urged ratification of the protocols, were presented by Gov. Theodore F. Green of Rhode Island. He was accompanied by members of the Delaware, Maryland and North Carolina Legislatures.

Resolutions from their State Assemblies were presented by Senators Austin (Republican), Vermont; Walcott (Republican), Connecticut, and Bulkely (Democrat), Ohio.

Bok Points to Record.

Curtis Bok, of Philadelphia, told of the World Court as "a going concern, with 49 nations as members." He pointed out that of the 22 judgments and 25 advisory opinions handed down by the court in the 12 years of its existence, "not one has ever been flouted."

The Women's National Committee of Republican Women for the World Court was represented by Margaret Buttenheim, who said she had found "overwhelming agreement" with former Secretary of State Stimson's conclusion that all the Senate reservations had been met by the Root formula.

Fred Brenchman, legislative representative of the National Grange, declared that "only in an international order, depending upon applications of the principles of law for the settlement of disputes, can there be security of life or livelihood for any of our citizens."

Tom Wallace, editor of the Louisville Times, presented resolutions urging ratification on behalf of 103 World Court committees.

W. W. Waymack, associate editor of the Des Moines Register, told of a questionnaire sent to 2,036 daily newspapers. Replies, he said, showed 87 per cent "unequivocably" for ratification.

Gen. Charles H. Sherrill, former Ambassador to Turkey, declared "business and professional men of the country are firmly in favor of ratification of the pending treaties, and have so declared themselves repeatedly."

Ulman Raps Reservations.

A statement was presented on behalf of the New York State and City bar associations, to the effect that lawyers are impressed "with the necessity of sustaining the permanent court, because they feel its very existence is an advance over the older method of appointing arbitral tribunals to deal with controversies after they have become acute."

Mrs. Carroll Miller, National Democratic committeewoman from Pennsylvania, said she spoke for the "informed sentiment of the Democratic party in asking prompt ratification of the pending World Court treaties without reservation or amendment."

Judge Joseph N. Ulman, of Baltimore, urged the committee not to accept reservations that would add new conditions to the protocols.

Reservations of this nature, he said, "are designed only to delay and if possible to defeat our adherence."

"Let no man," he urged, "kill the World Court with eleventh hour, unnecessary amendments."

Organization of a Safe Drivers' League, to promote safe and courteous driving, was perfected yesterday afternoon with Ringgold Hart as president.

Formed at the suggestion of William A. Van Duzer, District Traffic Director, the league invites members from taxicab companies, operators of pleasure cars and all other drivers, of either gas or horse propelled vehicles.

Applications for membership will be received by Mr. Van Duzer. All members will be furnished with seals to be placed on windshields. Organizations joining the league are expected to take an active interest in the conduct and safe driving practices of their drivers.

The league plans to have drivers' meetings, with lectures and moving pictures to promote safe driving. A safe-driving contest may be developed through fleets of comparable size competing, it was announced.

Vice presidents of the league elected yesterday are: George W. Offut, Richard J. Murphy, and James E. Colliflower. H. L. Leonard, safety engineer of the Washington Gas Light Co., was chosen secretary-treasurer.

W. W. Everett, of Woodward & Lothrop's, and Jerome Fancilli, executive secretary of the Motor Vehicle Owners Association, were elected directors.

Woman Describes Capture of Suspect

Held Both Man and Razor; 120 Days Is Sentence.

Glancing from behind the curtains of her living room window, Mrs. Marie Young, of the 1100 block of Ninth street northwest, saw Joseph N. Anderson, colored, of the 1200 block of Seventh street northwest, stealing her empty baby carriage, she told Judge Isaac Hitt in Police Court yesterday.

Anderson ran. Mrs. Young, who is 5 feet 4 inches tall, chased him. At a street intersection she caught him, and in the struggle, Mrs. Young asserted, Anderson dropped a razor.

Mrs. Young said she grasped the razor in one hand and Anderson with the other until police came. Judge Hitt, sentenced Anderson to 60 days for petit larceny and 60 days for carrying a concealed weapon.

"Perfect" Husband Boring, Wives Say

They agreed on that today when a newspaper polled a number of them to learn what they thought of a "husbands' code," drawn up by a Chicago woman. The code specified 10 points which the husband would have to live up to in order to justify his wife's love.

Points in the code were: The husband should take the wife out two nights a week; he should take the baby out for a walk now and then; he should bring home the pay check, and he should make all other women stay away.

"It would be a good code," one Baltimore wife said, "if you could get a man to live up to it."

"A man like that would be too boring," said another. "He would be too perfect to live," a third declared.

"I wouldn't want a man that no other woman would look at," asserted a fourth.

Job Insurance Bill Advocated By President

ployment insurance as an essential part of our program to build a more ample and secure life. The loss of a job brings discouragement and privation to the individual worker and his family. If an insurance or reserve fund has been accumulated, even a small payment from it at such a critical time will tide over the worker and keep up his morale and purchasing power. * * *

"We have in the past relied almost entirely upon private charities and public treasuries to sustain the costs of seasonal and intermittent unemployment. This is a practice that necessity will compel us to change to a very substantial degree. * * *

"Of course, unemployment insurance alone will not make unnecessary all relief for all people out of work for the entire period of a major economic depression, but it is my confident belief that such funds will, by maintaining the purchasing power of those temporarily out of work, act as a stabilizing device in our economic structure and as a method of retarding the rapid downward spiral curve and the onset of severe economic crises.

"I am interested to see that the bill before your committee seeks to promote unemployment insurance under State rather than National laws. This is an approach with which I agree, and which fulfills the promise of the Democratic platform for 1932 to favor 'unemployment insurance under State laws.' * * *

"The bill has another advantage in establishing a suitable relation of the National Government to unemployment insurance. Under our system of government, the task of caring for the unemployed falls primarily on the States. If a State can not bear the burden, the United States must be prepared to do so and to collect revenue for that purpose. * * *

"The general principles * * * seem to me sound, and the effect sought a necessary one for recovery and prevention of future economic crises; and I hope that the bill will be passed by the Congress at this session."

Meanwhile, Swope recommended further study by the House committee, giving his opinion that unemployment insurance should be established on a contributory system, under which employes would share the cost of the undertaking.

Points to Ohio Plan.

Sympathetic with the general idea, the industrialist declared it desirable if the State systems could be made more uniform. He also indicated he thought the proposed 5 per cent levy too high. He suggested study of the proposed Ohio plan, whereby employes, employers and the Government would join in building up reserves.

This reaction to the bill put forth by Senator Robert F. Wagner and approved by other such Administration leaders as Secretary Perkins and Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins is expected to prove mild when other industrial leaders are heard. Opposition is expected on the general grounds the Administration is putting "reform ahead of recovery."

The Wagner-Lewis bill was indorsed before the committee yesterday by Howard S. Cullman, chairman of the New York Conference for Unemployment Insurance Legislation, who declared New York needs only such a law to enact legislation, and John B. Andrews, of New York, of the American Association for Labor Legislation.

Auto Mishaps in Early March Under Last Year, Despite Rum

Number Drops 52, Though Injuries and Deaths Show Increase.

The fact that automobile accidents in the District during the first 15 days of March, when legal liquor was available, showed a sharp decrease from the number during the corresponding period last March has given new hope to Chairman George W. Offutt of the Alcoholic Beverage Board.

"This indicates," he said yesterday, "that the public does not wish to abuse its new freedom, and we hope this attitude will be maintained."

Figures comparing traffic mishaps during the first half of this month with those of last March were compiled by Director of Traffic William A. Van Duzer at the request of Offutt, who said he sought evidence thereby of any effect the sale of legal liquor is having on accidents. He expressed himself as pleased with the showing.

Although the number of mishaps and property damage cases decreased, the number of traffic deaths increased, the report showed. However, there was no evidence that this was due to the sale of alcoholic beverages, Van Duzer said.

A total of 338 traffic accidents was reported during the first half of March last year, the report indicated, as compared with 286 during the first 15 days this month. There were 156 reports of personal injuries in traffic during the first half of this month, as compared with 153 cases for a corresponding period last year.

Eight persons died in automobile accidents during the first half of March this year, while last year the number was only two.

After serving 24 hours of his 60-day sentence on a charge of stealing a $2 jacket, Willis Fairfax, 17, colored, was placed on probation by Judge Isaac Hitt in Police Court yesterday. The severe sentence had caused wide comment.

Administration Backs Demand Of Roosevelt for Stock Bill

of the board's credit powers. He said the "scientific" thing would be to give it full authority to determine margin requirements. Later, he asked a change in reserve requirements of member banks, to permit the board to keep closer check on credit for speculative purposes.

He said he did not think the revised bill would close any stock exchanges or materially hurt security values.

Agree on Margin Control.

While Gov. Black was testifying before the House committee, President Richard Whitney, of the New York Stock Exchange, was reiterating before the Senate committee objections to the bill voiced yesterday before the House group. Whitney and Black were in accord on giving the board broad margin control.

Earlier, the House Interstate Commerce group was thrown into disorder when Mr. Rand read the Wirt letter.

"Are you here making a direct charge, or by inference, that President Roosevelt has surrounded himself with men advocating the overthrow of this Government?" Chairman Rayburn asked.

The witness suggested the committee call Dr. Wirt to testify, but the chairman indicated he would not do so.

"You have quoted Mr. Wirt in a way to reflect on unnamed members of the Brain Trust in statements that, if true, are damnable and traitorous," said Representative Lea (Democrat), California.

"The committee should hear the full statement, and there should be an investigation," he asserted.

When Representative Mapes (Republican), Michigan, observed the Committee for the Nation once aided the "brain trust" in determining a monetary policy, Mr. Rand retorted:

"The monetary policy has been opposed by 'brain trusters' because the moment you have supplied plenty of money the need for regimentation is past."

Representative Bulwinkle (Democrat), North Carolina, asked the witness if he had sought the names of "brain trusters" referred to by Dr. Wirt.

"He said everyone knows them," Mr. Rand answered.

"Did he tell you their names?"

"No."

An Associated Press dispatch last night from Gary, Ind., quoted Dr. Wirt as confirming his letter, but declining to give the names of officials he had in mind.

Leading up to the charges carried in the Wirt letter, Mr. Rand alleged business had no voice in writing either of the Fletcher-Rayburn bills.

He declared the measure is more than a bill to regulate exchanges.

"It carries us much farther toward a regimented state—and that is too serious a decision to be made by indirection," he said. "In this and other legislation, the power of Congress is being undermined. We are being pushed along the road from democracy to Communism."

Dr. Wirt's letter quoted one of the "brain trusters" as saying:

"We are on the inside. We can control the avenues of influence. We can make the President believe that he is making decisions for himself.

"A leader must appear to be a strong man of action. He must make decisions and many times make them quickly, whether good or bad. Soon he will feel a superhuman flow of power from the flow of the decisions themselves—good or bad.

"Eventually he can be displaced because of his bad decisions. With Mr. Roosevelt's background, we do not expect him to see this revolution through."

Black Sees No Danger.

Appearing with Gov. Black before the Senate Banking Committee was Tom K. Smith, assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, who Wednesday refused to commit his department to regulatory and margin requirements of the bill. He reiterated his statement before the Senate group. Preceding Gov. Black before the House Committee, Chairman Winfield W. Riefler, of the Central Statistical Board, unqualifiedly approved the bill and indorsed its margin requirements.

When Gov. Black completed his statements before the House committee, Chairman Rayburn thanked him for his "fairness."

"We've had too little of it at these hearings," he said.

Asked by Representative Wolverton (Republican), New Jersey, if he thought the bill would prove "disastrous," Black replied:

"I don't think so, and I don't believe the board thinks so. There was the same cry when we went off the gold standard and adopted the gold bill. I thought so myself when we took out gold. But I was wrong."

He said board members had "read every sentence" of the bill and submitted suggestions that had been incorporated. He read a statement of indorsement he said the board had agreed to at a meeting attended by every member except Secretary Morgenthau and the Comptroller of the Currency.

Others appearing before the committee included Robert K. Cassatt, Philadelphia investment broker, who criticized "arbitrary and inflexible control over margins," and George B. Gibbons, of New York, who asked that municipal bonds be exempted from listing under provisions of the bill.

Air "Stunt" Ban Relaxed as Aid For Deaf Persons

Though flying of passengers "acrobatically for hire" is prohibited by air commerce regulations, this rule will be waived for persons afflicted with deafness, aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce announced yesterday.

Deafness, it seems, can be aided or possibly cured by aerial acrobatics. So the medical section of the aeronautics branch made a study of what a few loops or sudden dives will do to a person who can't hear the drone of the propellor.

The section found that it is highly probable that some cures have been made by such flights. But if afflicted persons feel a little skittish about taking to the air to effect a cure, doctors say that the same results can be obtained through the use of a compression chamber.

However, commercial pilots, with the permission of the Department of Commerce may fly passengers "acrobatically for hire" if the flight is recommended by a physician and a waiver is requested in advance.

"New Deal" Ace In Portugal Ends Deficit

Professor Puts Country in First Place Financially.

Lisbon, (U.P.).—A university professor who entered politics as minister of finance and became prime minister has straightened out the Portuguese financial situation until it has become, according to David Lloyd George, the best in the world.

Dr. Oliveira Salazar was a member of the faculty of the University of Coimbra when he was drafted to put the Portuguese treasury in order five years ago. He now is credited with eliminating the country's budgetary deficit, with creating a favorable balance, with reducing the internal floating debt almost to extinction, and with building up strong cash balances for the government in national and foreign banks.

All this was done with the cooperation of the Portuguese citizens who made great sacrifices in order to put the national financial affairs in good shape.

Taxes Up, Pay Cut.

Business men, industrialists, property owners saw their receipts diminish with the added taxes imposed by Salazar. Civil employes and military men saw their salaries suffer a monthly discount. Other workers contributed 2 per cent of their salaries for the benefit of the nation's unemployed who now number 20,000, as compared with 40,000 in January, 1933.

Salazar's measures were opposed by many who had become accustomed to small taxes. A movement of protest began. Salazar, supported by the armed forces carried through his plan. In one of his rare public speeches he pointed out that increased taxation was the only means of national salvation.

Now Prime Minister Salazar is using money the government received from its citizens in building highways, improving telegraphic communications and ports, aiding the unemployed and in other public service channels.

Has No Deficit.

Portugal is one of the few countries without a deficit, its economic status has enjoyed good fortune. Exports of wines and canned goods slumped, but the export of manufactured articles made up for this loss. The loss of certain foreign markets was recompensed by the extension of consumption of Portuguese products by Portuguese colonies.

Construction work was encouraged by the government's ruling that all building now under way or that is undertaken before 1940 be exempt from taxes up to that year.

Weight Shortens Life of Women

Result of Studies Is Published.

New York (U.P.).—Twenty per cent of all Americans are suffering from the results of overweight or underweight, according to an analysis of the health statistics of 336,000 persons, made by Louis I. Dublin for the American Magazine.

The study shows that if you are under 30, it is a real health advantage to weigh at least 10 per cent more than the average. If you are over 35, moderate underweight—about 10 per cent below the average—indicates a longer life than the average.

Women 25 years old who are 20 per cent below average weight have a death rate of 11 per cent greater than the average. In the older group, women who are 10 per cent overweight have a death rate of 22 per cent above the average. If they weigh 25 per cent above the average, the extra mortality jumps to 74 per cent, shortening life 6½ years.

Deadlock on Auto Strike Still Reported Unbroken

Labor Grady talked with employes preceding conferences during the afternoon at NRA headquarters. Johnson arrived at the headquarters with the manufacturers, representing nearly all of the big automobile concerns, except the Ford Motor Co., which is not involved in the strike controversy. About 15 representatives of workers, with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, preceded them by half an hour.

Separate Conferences.

Following the sessions, it was said Johnson had conferred with both groups separately.

In the manufacturers' group were Alvan Macauley, president of Packard Motors; Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors; Donaldson Brown, vice president of General Motors; John Thomas Smith, vice president of General Motors; Walter Chrysler, C. W. Nash, Roy D. Chapin, of Hudson Motors, and Nicholas Kelley, of Nash Motors.

Although they refused to comment, it was learned later that Chrysler, Nash and Brown had been named as a committee to see the President. The labor men, evidently instructed in advance, each said the same thing:

"The matter is in the hands of the President."

Green announced that his group also had named a committee of three to call at the White House. They are William Collins, who has been organizing the automobile industry for the A. F. of L.; Richard L. Bird, head of the local union at the Fisher Body plant at Pontiac, Mich., and John A. Bailey, head of the local at the Buick plant at Flint, Mich.

Issue Up to President.

"The matter is now going to the President," Green said, "and inasmuch as the matter is in his hands he should give out any statement concerning its status and the outcome of the conferences."

The labor representatives plainly were optimistic as they left Johnson's office. Collins said it appeared possible that the whole controversy would be settled last night. He declared that the meeting planned for the White House was "the essential meeting." Green went so far as to predict that the union heads would leave Washington today.

This was in contrast to their attitude after they had met the President, when they announced they were staying in Washington.

The labor representatives and committee of manufacturers arrived at the White House almost simultaneously. Still keeping carefully apart, the manufacturers went to the office of Marvin MacIntyre, one of the President's secretaries, and the labor men to the Cabinet room. Meanwhile, Johnson conferred with the President.

Confer With President.

Next, the President and Johnson talked with the manufacturers. The conference lasted for more than an hour. The labor men did not see the President until after the manufacturers had left. Following the meeting Macauley and Chrysler each declared that "nothing can be said."

"I am just a chore boy," Nash said. "I'm just doing what I am told to do."

The meeting with the union representatives lasted half an hour. Johnson came out with the labor men.

"I can't say anything," he said.

"Is there a chance for a settlement tomorrow?"

"I hope so."

"How far are they apart?"

Johnson smilingly held the forefinger and thumb of his right hand about an inch apart.

"You'll have to talk to the President," Collins said. "We are still making substantial progress. We shall await the call of the President tomorrow."

No White House Comment.

In answer to further questioning, Collins said the controversy was "not terminated but progressing."

"We are neither optimistic nor pessimistic," he said. "We are working."

There was no comment from the White House. It was not indicated whether the President had made a definite proposal, or whether some proposal for settlement had been carried to him from the meetings at NRA headquarters.

It was considered probable that some plan for Government supervised elections of employe representatives was being considered. The question still hinges on the objection of organized labor to company unions and the insistence of manufacturers that the A. F. of L. is attempting to gain control of their workers and to force recognition by employers.

Meanwhile, the threat of passage of the Wagner labor bill outlawing company unions was facing the manufacturers. Presidential indorsement of the bill and its ultimate passage would be a complete victory for the unions. In retaliation, it was reported, the manufacturers might curtail production or shut down their plants entirely.

It was considered significant that Green was not a member of the committee that called on the President. Green has been the subject of continued attack by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, representing the manufacturers involved, and it was thought that there might be more possibility of getting the opposing groups into a joint meeting if Green were not present.

Says Strike Will Wait.

Collins said that he did not believe there would be any great difficulty in keeping workers from striking if the negotiations should drag along.

"I think our men will be patriotic and give the President every chance," he said.

While union representatives in Washington were uncommunicative, the Associated Press reported that workers in Detroit were cheered by news snt to them by the men who conferred with President Roosevelt Thursday.

One telegram said:

"Conference with President Roosevelt four hours. Definite and important results. Feel elated. More information at noon Friday."

Meanwhile, notices were being posted in all 40 of the General Motors Corporation automotive plants announcing that the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce recommendation for a reduction in working hours to 36 a week, with an increase in the hourly wage such that the total received would not be reduced, was being put into effect at once.

Somerville Cards An Ace at Augusta

Finishes Round With 78 for 160, However.

Augusta, Ga., March 23 (AP).—Ross (Sandy) Somerville, of Canada, former holder of the United States amateur golf championship, featured the second round of the Masters Invitation Tournament today by scoring a hole in 1 on the 145-yard seventh.

Somerville used a niblick. The ball hit in front and bounced into the cup. It was the first "ace" on the Augusta National course. In spite of it the Canadian was only 39 to the turn.

Sandy Somerville's ace on the short seventh failed to do him much good. It followed a 7 on the fourth, where the Canadian amateur star got tangled up in the ditch, and he finished his second round with a 78 for a 36-hole total of 160.

Barney Introduces Griffith to Stone

Biloxi, Miss., March 23 (Spl.). Manager Walter Johnson of the Cleveland Indians and Owner Clark Griffith of the Washington Club were in a huddle in the Nats' hotel lobby this morning, discussing a trade, mayhap, or the pennant race, or something.

Tapping Johnson on the shoulder, Griffith pointed and inquired: "Who's that big, strapping fellow with your club over there He's a nice-looking chap, all right. What does he play?"

Johnson looked. "The one without the hat?" he asked.

"Yes," said Griffith. He's the one."

"That fellow," said Johnson, "is John Stone, your new outfielder."

French Design Speedy Bomber For Air Fleet

Giant New Ships, Well Armed, Carries Huge Usefrl Load.

Paris (U.P.). — Leo, last word in France's air armament, has been tested and soon is to enter service as a night bomber.

Defensively armed with ten machine guns, the craft has attained a speed of 300 kilometers an hour at an altitude of 1,200 feet, carrying a full load, including almost four tons of explosives.

Leo 30 is the official designation of the plane, which is built by the Liore-et-Olivier factory. It is a monoplane with four motors set tandem in the wings to port and starboard.

The bomber has a double machine gun emplacement forward of the pilot, one aft of the wings, and one below, protecting the ship at all angles of attack. There are machine gun pivots also in each of the engine rooms in the wings.

The wing span is 114 feet, length of fuselage 72 feet.

Leo, it has been suggested, may prove to be a candidate for the air mail route to South America because of its speed and lightness. Commercially equipped, it is believed it could carry from six to eight passengers.

Another air force innovation is the portable sausage-shuttle. This engine of war consists of a cylinder equipped with airplane engine and propeller and a pilot's nest. Transportable on trucks, it is used for moving a captive balloon from one position to another. This operation formerly was effected tediously with a rope from the ground. Made into a blimp, however, the sausage now can be moved over wooded, or otherwise difficult, ground with a minimum of delay.

U.S. Plans Millions For Slum Removal

tion is prepared to increase allotments for slum clearance and housing in next year's budget, beginning July 1, President Roosevelt said that the chief difficulty so far has been real estate values.

Values Seen Fictitious.

In many instances he believes property valuations are so high as to be fictitious, thus precluding the feasibility of building low-cost housing on a paying basis. This condition he said has greatly hindered the Government in fostering such projects in New York and elsewhere.

Mr. Roosevelt expressed the opinion that rooms in such buildings should be priced at $6 or $7 in New York, instead of $10 or $12, and that rents in other cities should be proportionately lower, perhaps $4 or $5.

Meanwhile, Administrator Hopkins disclosed that a Nation-wide program of slum clearance would be undertaken by his organization. Those continuing on work relief rolls will take part in a systematic razing of useless and unsanitary buildings, remodeling and repairs.

Uniform procedure for this program was developed yesterday at a conference of city officials, labor leaders and others at the Powhatan Hotel. It would form one of the chief activities of the new Work Division of the Relief Administration, now inaugurating its new policies.

Tat Off the Trombone Makes Jazz High-Hat

Baltimore, March 23 (AP). — A simple way to make jazz as respectable as classical music has been advanced by Frederick Huber, director of municipal music in Baltimore.

The method, in effect, is to take the hat off the end of the trombone.

"What we need is not the elimination of jazz, but jazz done better," declared the director of the only municipal department of music in the country with a tax-supported symphony orchestra.

Native, Not Missionary, Killed by Jungle Snake

How a native was crushed to death by a python in the jungles near Sincelejo, Colombia, several weeks ago, was described to the Foreign Mission Board of Seventh Day Adventists in a letter made public at Takoma Park yesterday, according to the Associated Press.

A previous report, carried some days ago, described the victim as a missionary. In the letter, from James B. Ross, mission secretary, the man was identified as Ordonez, a "believer," but not a baptized member of the church.

Administration Refuses to Join Election Fights

that last sentence and he would say that it meant just what it said.

This art of cryptic statements seems to run in the Texas blood, for 24 hours before, Vice President Garner announced he intended to vote for Connally and added: "I am not authorized to speak for the Administration unless I am asked to."

On the other side, Representative Bailey showed he also was able to bounce the English language with Texan deftness. After a visit to the White House a couple of days ago Mr. Bailey reported that he had offered to withdraw from the race if Mr. Roosevelt desired, but added that he was still in it.

Lest by chance the utterances of those plain, blunt spoken Texans had left doubt as to what they meant, and because President Roosevelt was being drawn into the Tammany fight, the White House yesterday issued the following statement:

Won't Be Drawn In.

"In answer to newspaper reports that the anti-Curry fight in New York City would be discussed with the President by Postmaster General Farley, it was definitely stated today at the White House that the President will take no part whatever in such discussions nor will he in any way allow himself to be drawn into the political controversy between Curry and anti-Curry factions.

"Press reports suggest that Mr. Farley would outline the situation to President Roosevelt and discuss with him the part the National Administration should take in the anti-Curry movement were categorically denied.

"It was emphasized that the President will strictly adhere to this 'hands off' policy when and wherever attempts are made to involve him in local political party contests."

While this statement is to be taken literally so far as the President himself is concerned, it is generally understood that Mr. Farley is determined that Curry must go. Feeling between them has been bitter ever since the small, stubborn Tammany chieftain climaxed his opposition to the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt by rising in the gray dawn in the Chicago Stadium and demanding a poll of the New York delegation.

Farley Watched Coldly.

That forced every New York convention delegate to go on record as between Mr. Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith, and it was not done without considerable gulping by some of the delegates thus unhappily put on the spot. Jim Farley sat on the platform that early morning looking down coldly at the little blue-eyed Tammany chieftain and chewed his gum a little harder.

There was a superficial truce between Farley and Curry during the campaign, but the day after election, war was resumed. By withholding patronage, by making it clear to all of the Roosevelt forces in New York, by stepping into the mayoralty fight with Joseph V. McKee and smashing the Tammany ticket, Farley has battered down his enemy. It is now only a matter of agreeing upon a successor, so far as the pro-Administration forces are concerned.

Although Curry is going down fighting, most politicians figure, in the phrase of Gen. Johnson, that he is about in the position of a man who mounts the guillotine on a bet that the ax won't work.

May Declare Curry's Position Now Vacant

New York, March 23 (AP).—A movement to declare the post of Tammany chieftain vacant was proposed today by forces seeking to oust John F. Curry from the leadership of the Democratic organization.

The action was considered by district leaders opposed to the Curry regime as the White House issued a statement saying President Roosevelt would take no part in the controversy.

Under the proposed plan, William P. Kenneally, chairman of the Tammany executive committee, would be asked to call a meeting and announce that the vacancy existed. Then the district leaders would ballot for a new chieftain.

Curry, whose principal candidates were defeated in the November election by the Fusion ticket, returned recently from Florida with word that he did not intend to retire. David A. Mahoney, leader of the First Assembly District, called on him Wednesday to demand his resignation.

The way for agreement on a new leader, in case Curry should be ousted, was believed smoothed somewhat by reports that friends of Edward J. Ahearn, leading candidate, would go along in the selection of any strong man. Curry narrowly defeated Ahearn for the post in 1929.

Wall Can Not Fall, School Aid States

Lives Held Not in Danger at McKinley High.

No lives are endangered by a defective wall at McKinley High School on Second street northeast, Jere M. Crane, assistant superintendent, said yesterday.

Crane pointed out that the wall has been defective ever since a cut was made in the sidewalk for conduits. Of reinforced concrete, with floating steel rods, Mr. Crane said the wall could not topple, but would merely bend.

The street on which the wall is situated has been closed to traffic. School officials have made several requests that the wall be fixed. It flanks a terrace dividing the school building from the street.

Woodruff Dies; Served Nation Here in 1907

Remembered in Capital as Member of "T. R.'s" "Tennis Cabinet."

George W. Woodruff, 70, Assistant Attorney General for the Department of the Interior in 1907, and Acting Secretary of the Interior five months during that period, died yesterday at Harrisburg, Pa. He was public service commissioner of Pennsylvania.

Becoming ill with a cold early this week, Woodruff was taken to a hospital. Pleurisy set in, according to the Associated Press.

His death terminated a colorful career, which led him from triumphs on the gridiron in the early days of football to an unofficial post on President Theodore Roosevelt's "Tennis Cabinet" and the Federal judgeship of Hawaii in 1909 and 1910.

Woodruff's career began in the late eighties, when his feats on the gridiron won him fame. He is credited with having invented the "flying wedge" while a student at Yale. Later he played football at the University of Pennsylvania. He also was a member of the crew there.

From 1903 until 1906 Woodruff was law officer for the Forestry Service here. He assumed his posts in the Interior Department the following year.

Woodruff was general counsel for the Conservation Commission and the Pennsylvania State Grange from 1918 until 1920, and State attorney general during Gov. Pinchot's first term.

Wiley, Akron Crash Survivor, Is Named Commander of Macon

HERBERT V. WILEY.

Tall, gray-haired Lieut. Comdr. Herbert V. Wiley, veteran of half a dozen narrow escapes as the Navy's most intrepid lighter-than-air craft officer, yesterday was officially named to command the Macon.

Commander Wiley, in the storm-lashed control car, spoke the last words: "Stand by for a crash!" a split second before the U. S. S. Akron plunged into the Atlantic April 4, 1933, off the New Jersey coast, with a loss of 73 lives. He was the only officer who survived.

It will be almost a year to a day from the Akron disaster when Wiley takes charge of the Macon. He is no stranger, however, to the silver-hued pride of the Navy as he was aboard the Macon several months ago in acceptance test flights.

In announcing Wiley's promotion, Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, Navy, chief of aeronautics, commented:

"About one-third of the officers of the U. S. S. Macon are being replaced so that other qualified lighter-than-air officers may have actual rigid airship experience.

"The changes and interchanges of other duties connected with lighter-than-air activities have been made with a view to utilizing the past experiences of these officers to the highest degree and afford them as much experience as possible in all duties connected with rigid airships and is in accordance with the established change of duty policy of the Navy Department."

Wiley will relinquish his post as navigator of the U. S. S. Cincinnati. A graduate of Annapolis, he once was commanding officer of the dirigible Los Angeles and for a time directed mooring of dirigibles at Lakehurst, N. J.

Another outstanding air tragedy was recalled when the orders transferred Lieut. Comdr. Charles E. Rosendahl, navigator aboard the Shenandoah when that ship collapsed nine years ago in Ohio. He will command Lakehurst Naval Air Station.

Other transfers: Commander Alger H. Dresel, present commander of the Macon, to command the Naval Air Station at Sunnyvale, Calif.; Lieut. Comdr. J. L. Kenworthy, commanding officer of the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, to duty as executive officer of the Macon, vice Lieut. Comdr. J. C. Arnold, for whom no orders have been issued; Lieut. Comdr. Bernard F. Jenkins, from the Naval Air Station at Sunnydale, Calif., to duties as executive officer of that station, and Lieut. Comdr. Francis W. Reichelderfer, to the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst from his present duty as meteorological officer aboard the U. S. S. Oklahoma.

Revised Mail Bill Permits Lines to Sue

against the Government growing out of previous contracts.

This provision, if enacted, would give the airlines whose contracts were canceled an opportunity to establish the fact their contracts did not result from fraud and collusion, as charged by President Roosevelt and Postmaster General Farley.

Earlier in the day Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, in an attack on the Administration, sharply criticized the failure to give the air-mail contractors a chance to be heard before their contracts were canceled. He said the contracts were canceled to "add to the prestige of the New Deal."

Black Agrees to Charge.

He contended that an advance hearing should have been held chiefly because, as was demonstrated in the court case which Transcontinental Western Air, Inc., sought to bring, the airlines had "no redress," being without power to sue the Government without its permission. Senator Black agreed with Hastings the airlines should have this opportunity.

The revised bill also contained:

Granting the right of appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission to a low bidder whose bid has been rejected by the Postmaster General on the ground he lacks responsibility.

Authorizing four transcontinental mail routes instead of making three such routes mandatory.

Providing that the contracts shall be made for a four-year period instead of three years, and authorizing the Interstate Commerce Commission to extend such contracts for another three years when the service has been good.

Fixing 6 cents an ounce as the air-mail-postage rate instead of the 5 cents in the bill and 8 cents under existing law.

Providing for a fine of from $1,000 to $10,000 and imprisonment for not less than six months nor more than five years as punishment for any one violating the proposed law, in addition to forfeiture of any mail contract held by such person.

The section of the original bill denying mail contracts to air lines owning stock in or whose stock is owned by holding companies or aviation manufacturing companies and to those with interlocking directorates was rewritten in the new bill to clarify it.

Meanwhile O. Max Gardner, former North Carolina Governor and now a lawyer here, revealed he is working with the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce "in its effort to cooperate with the Administration to work out a constructive program for commercial aviation."

He said he was not interested in any particular company and did not care to discuss at this time progress he has made, although he has conferred with Government officials.

Revenue Bill Finally Passes In West Virginia

$13,300,000 Measure Hit in House; Schools to Get 10 Million.

Charleston, W. Va., March 23 (Spl.).—As the compromise emergency revenue bill went through the formalities of adoption in the West Virginia Legislature today, meeting fiery attacks in the House, the State administration submitted its appropriation bills calling for a total authorization of $13,300,000.

The largest item is $10,000,000 for the support of the free schools, the next being $3,000,000 for relief. Other items include:

Increasing the personnel of the State tax commissioner's office, $130,000; for purchasing tracts for State parks in cooperation with the Federal Government, $70,000.

Liquidating the penitentiary parole fund and the penitentiary warden's trust fund, tied up in closed banks, $10,000; for the establishment of State employment offices, $10,000; for the attorney general's office, $5,000; for the State's share of the salaries of county farm agents in cooperation with the Federal Government, $50,000, annually.

Fair Commission Funds.

In addition, Senator Lee J. Sandridge (Democrat), Barbour, introduced a bill appropriating $10,000 for continuance of the Century of Progress Commission. The Senate also adopted a resolution by Senator Albert W. Reynolds (Democrat), Mercer, continuing that commission.

Delegate Rush D. Holt (Democrat), Lewis, led the attack against the compromise revenue bill in the House after it had approved the conference report. The Senate had earlier adopted the report without debate, but had to defer action on the bill itself until the House had acted.

Holt repeated charges made by him in opposing the original Senate bill, declaring that the House had been "starved out," and that the tax bill was written through "utility control of the Legislature," which he termed an "invisible government." Members would not be voting for the measure, he said, if it were not for the necessity of returning home after a prolonged session. The new revenue bill is estimated to yield $13,500,000 over 15 months.

The House passed the revenue bill, 51 to 34.

The Senate vote was 22 to 5.

Legislature Cost Heavy.

A report made today at the State auditor's office disclosed that the Legislature, in almost continuous session for two years, had cost $490,947 up until Wednesday night. The present second special session began last November 21.

Both branches finally passed a bill changing monthly salaries of various county court members. The House had previously passed a bill and the Senate returned it with changes. Today the House accepted the Senate changes. By the bill, salaries were increased in ten courts and reduced in two others. The new salaries in Berkeley County are $30, in Jefferson $30, in Greenbrier $50 and in Monongahela $150.

The House approved creation of a State board of five members to study water conservation. Appointment would be by the Governor and no salaries would be paid.

Final approval was given for a State board of nine to study court practices and procedure.

Farm Millennium Heralded; Hydrocarbon Power Is 'Crop'

By Howard W. Blakeslee
(Associated Press Science Editor).

New York, March 23 (AP).—Immediate start of a new type of farming, with fields growing the "hydrocarbons" of coal and oil for use as power, is urged by three Iowa scientists in a report issued by the Chemical Foundation tonight.

A Congressional hearing where they are invited to give their findings is announced to begin April 15. The hearing is on the farm relief plan to mix 10 per cent of corn alcohol with gasoline for motor fuel.

The Iowa trio hopes to show that instead of being simply a temporary relief, this use of "power alcohol" will inaugurate the great agricultural revolution predicted by scientists for the last 20 years. This is the growing of chemicals as well as food on farms.

The report is written by Drs. Leo M. Christensen, Ralph M. Hixon and Ellis J. Fulmer, of the Iowa State College, at Ames. Coal and oil, most of man's present power source, they explain, are hydrocarbons. All the farmer's harvest crops are carbohydrates.

Chemically, the crops and the coal and oil are all made of the same prime elements, carbon and hydrogen. The atoms of carbon and hydrogen are differently fitted together, and chemists have discovered how to interchange them, so as to change a plant into a hydrocarbon, a fuel which will burn and explode.

The report says that farms can produce all these fuel hydrocarbons the world can use—all that it now gets from coal and oil. They foresee this not as an abrupt change, but as a progressive conservation move, growing as the supplies of coal and oil dwindle.

The farmer's historic hand-to-mouth existence will change, they forecast. For it is due greatly to all his crops being perishables, and as he changes part of the harvests into power hydrocarbons, he will have imperishables which can be stored, when needed, against the "lean years."

Their tests of "power alcohol" from corn for immediate use, they state, show the way. They point out that 20 foreign countries now mix alcohol with gasoline and that England begins it soon.

Dr. Angell Visions University Under Federal Influence

Berkeley, Calif., March 23 (AP).—Dr. James R. Angell, president of Yale University, declared today the American university should prepare for the possible extension of government influence into the realm of higher education.

While not anticipating any immediate and material influence with institutions of higher learning by outside agencies, Dr. Angell urged that dangers be recognized and opposed. He spoke at charter day exercises of the University of California.

"As the tendency grows to turn over to government increasing amounts of social and economic control—and this tendency has been spreading with amazing rapidity both here and abroad—it seems to me all but certain that education, first perhaps on its elementary and secondary levels, but ultimately on its university levels, will be brought into the circle of this expanding influence," he said.

"It seems to me that its coming is already written on the wall, and I therefore think we shall be well advised to expect it and make some preparation."

France Would Revive Entente Cordiale Pact

London Note Seeks Barrier to Future Aggression by Germany.

Paris, March 23 (AP).—A revival of the old Entente Cordiale which brought Great Britain into the World War is sought by France in a secret communication to London elaborating on an arms note.

The latter document, made public tonight, itself referred guardedly to this French desire in discussing the necessity of safeguarding against violations of any arms convention.

"If established violations endanger the security of a state, common action by the powers should be used for the benefit of the threatened nation," the note said.

"This common action should come into play particularly if the violation degenerated into aggression."

Would End Arms Parley

If British guarantees of aid are not forthcoming, the note makes it plain that the Geneva Disarmament Conference is at an end.

It leaves the door open, however, for a new conference which would recognize and limit German rearmament, limit the arms of other countries, and settle the security question.

Such a conference was interpreted as essentially European and political in nature, and one in which the United States and Russia probably would not be asked to participate.

The signing of an arms convention, the note added, permitting Germany to rearm would be a blow to the League of Nations, to which, it asserted, "France remains faithful."

"Whatever may have been said or attempted against the league, it remains the only organization capable of furnishing a collective guarantee of peace," the message maintained.

The flat assertion that Germany is violating the post-war Versailles treaty by rearming was made in the note, which said also that France refuses to sanction this rearmament and at the same time join other powers in disarmament moves.

"Germany is bringing up her armaments to a much higher level than that authorized by the treaty," the communication affirmed.

Referring to the covenant on disarmament, the note stated that the disarmament commission "is entitled to say in conjunction with all other interests at stake whether these principles be departed from."

Five Leading Problems.

Five problems were listed as demanding settlement:

The status of semi-military organizations—such as the Nazi Storm Troopers in Germany, which the Reich says are not soldiers, but which France wants counted as effectives.

The methods of disarmament supervision.

Temporary and eventually permanent limitation on arms budgets.

The control of the manufacture of arms.

Guarantees of the observance of any pact.

"France can neither understand nor admit that exaggerated pretentions to rearmament formulated on one side should constitute an argument for asking of other powers the reductions of armaments," it was pointed out.

Regarding a British plan which would "associate an immediate reduction in armaments imposed upon certain powers with an immediate increase in armaments granted other powers, the communication said:

"The very conception of such a plan of disarmament calls forth the most serious objections."

German Claim Refused.

France refused, further, "the immediate claim by Germany for a regular army of 300,000 men with corresponding equipments without a previous examination of the present state of disarming," and insisted on the observance of the League of Nations' covenant clause on disarmament provisions.

As evidence of the French desire for an agreement, even at a sacrifice, if security is provided, the note pointed out that France, between 1920 and 1932, "reduced the term of military service 66 per cent, the number of divisions 50 per cent, and her effectives 25 per cent, and between June, 1932, and June, 1933, reduced the national defense budget 2,500,000,000 francs."

Senate to Follow House on 5-5 Pay informally it might be possible to work out the desired changes so that the whole thing could be done on the floor without the delay incident to another conference.

Senators Steiwer, McCarran, Cutting (Republican), of New Mexico, and others, however, fear the process may prove unsatisfactory because each proposed change would have to be voted on and the result might be only a partial rectification of what they believe to be errors. Changes made in conference could be voted on as a whole when the report is taken up on the floor.

Veto Threat Remains.

President Roosevelt is said to have decided to veto the bill because of the provision restoring presumptive veteran cases to the benefit rolls permanently.

The Borah amendment is expected to cause trouble in Congress. It is a touchy subject, because it involves the pay of members of House and Senate, a majority of whom usually are afraid to raise their own salaries. Senator Borah is insistent on his amendment and has threatened to take the floor if it is dropped out in conference.

It was kept in during previous conferences at the insistence of the Senate conferees. The House wants it dropped, but they don't want much talk about it, as was evidenced when they shouted down Representative Shoemaker (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, when he mentioned the subject, when the question was under debate in the House.

leaders, what percentage of workers are loyal to the union. Many were forced to join by circumstances. Many others were induced to join by promises.

The manufacturers' decision to shorten hours and increase pay was therefore designed to prove to "waverers" that their rights would be taken care of by company action, without the pressure of the A. F. of L.

It was also regarded as a move to insure operation of the great plants, if the Washington conferences are abortive and the men, some of whom are extremely restless, decide upon a walk-out. The new regulations, the manufacturers felt, should be so attractive that a majority of the men would fall away from the unions and refuse to obey the strike orders.

The bmore pessimistic of observers also felt that is was an indication that the manufacturers were preparing for an adverse decision in Washington—that they believe no compromise can be reached which will be acceptable to them, and that they are willing to accept the chance of keeping open in defiance of the Federation.

Showdown Slated Soon.

This feeling was emphasized by hints from the manufacturers that they expect, sooner or later, a complete showdown on the issue of closed or open shop. The showdown may come any time within the next ten years. They would prefer to have it come at the present moment, when, their statisticians say, only one-third of the employes owe any allegiance to the federation.

The shorter-hours and higher pay decision met Henry Ford's recent boost in wages to the $5 minimum, and put the industry outside of some specialized "feeder" industries and auxiliaries, on the same wage basis throughout.

Stately London Houses Vanish

Noble Residences Victims of Triumphant March of Progress.

London (U.P.).—The dignified town residences of former noble English families are succumbing to the march of progress.

The quiet old squares of Mayfair and Belgravia will soon be gone, for the stately old homes of the nobility, for which these districts were once famous, are slowly but steadily passing, and in their places are rising enormous blocks of residential apartments.

Houses in Lowndes Square 100 years ago were of a purely private residential character. Six of these houses, which stood on a self-contained site, have now completely disappeared, and rising from the site are now the scaffolding and girders of London's latest block of apartments.

Due to be completed late this year, these apartments will be among the largest in England, many comprising nine bedrooms and three bathrooms. Three squash racket courts and five automobile garages are being constructed for the use of residents.

The drastic change is apparently meeting with full approval from some quarters. Estate agents report they are receiving many inquiries for the larger and more luxurious type of service apartment from people who a few years ago would have regarded them as anathema.

Federal Prisoners Make Own 'Giggle Water,' Says Warden

Atlanta, March 23 (AP).—Inmates of the Federal penitentiary here persistently manufacture intoxicants for their own use and "often they drink more than they ought to," Deputy Warden Julian A. Schoen revealed today in United States District Court.

The disclosure was brought out at the trial of six persons accused of conspiring to smuggle narcotics into the prison.

He said the beverages are made by mixing fruit juices with yeast and quite a "pop-off" is the result.

Of course, the authorities use their best efforts to stop the practice, the deputy warden continued, but they have not succeeded fully.

The first intimation of drinking within the prison came in the testimony of C. M. Head, captain of the guard. He described Robert C. Gibson, an inmate and one of the defendants on trial, as having been observed under the influence of alcohol twice.

Rocky Mountain Area Shows Building Gains

New York, March 23 (AP).—Contracts awarded for all classes of construction in the 37 States east of the Rock Mountains during the first two weeks of March reached a total, within 4 per cent of volume for the month of February, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation.

The total of $92,521,800 was also 55 per cent larger than the amount for March, 1933, the Dodge bulletin states, adding that while the large increase over last year was due in part to larger governmental undertakings, a moderate gain in private building was noted.

French, Swiss Face Trouble On Gold Stand

Amsterdam Loan Made After Paris Fails to Purchase Bonds.

Paris, March 23 (AP).—Troubles for the European gold bloc, it was apparent today, are fast developing.

France, short of cash, was obliged to raise approximately $65,000,000 by selling treasury bonds in Amsterdam, while Switzerland is agitating devaluation of the Swiss franc.

The bloc suffered its first shock when Czechoslovakia recently devalued the krone by one-sixth.

The empty French treasury was replenished temporarily, but foreign borrowing emphasizes the inability to borrow in France, which Georges Bonnet, former foreign minister, had repeatedly said was impossible until confidence had been restored.

Country Still Restless.

Louis Germain-Martin, present finance minister, still firmly insists that the franc is solid, but the country's unrest over the Stavisky scandal and its accompanying blood riots is so acute that Premier Gaston Doumergue will try to quiet things by a radio appeal.

Swiss difficulties were revealed to the public through the resignation yesterday of Jean Musy, for 14 years minister of finance and leader of the country's gold bloc forces.

He protested agitation for devaluation and what he described as inflationary expenditures of the government and railroads.

Following the resignation of Musy the Swiss government yesterday officially denied rumors that the resignation had come over the gold standard issue.

High Gold Coverage.

The last weekly statement of the National Swiss Bank showed gold holdings of 1,824,498,146 Swiss francs for a note circulation of 1,371,929,295 francs and total liabilities of 2,026,986,871 francs. The ratio was about 90 per cent and the gold coverage of the note circulation alone stood at 133 per cent.

The successor to Mr. Musy is expected to be appointed in the next 48 hours. Many believe Pilet-Golaz, President of the Swiss Confederation, now at the head of the railroad and postoffices departments, and a highly conservative liberal of French Switzerland, might be entrusted with the finance department.

Russian Rescuers Still Seek Planes

Attempt to Save 89 on Ice Is Delayed.

Fairbanks, Alaska, March 23 (AP) A three-member Russian relief expedition, which hopes to aid in rescue efforts for 89 Russians marooned on ice floes in Bering Sea, still was negotiating today for airplanes with which to make the attempt.

The three are Prof. George Yushakoff and Pilots F. A. Levanevsky and M. T. Sletneff.

French Army Under Scrutiny In Spy Probe

Retired Officer Questioned by Magistrate; Denies Knowing Switzes.

Paris, March 23 (AP).—Whether activities of a far-flung spy ring extended into the French army was a question on which Andre Benon, investigating magistrate, was concentrated today.

After questioning Col. Dumoulin, retired army officer and editor of a military publication, seized as an active member of the band, Benon turned toward the army.

Dumoulin denied he knew Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Switz, young American couple who, police said, have confessed activity in the espionage plot.

The former officer was arrested following sensational disclosures by the Americans. Despite Dumoulin's denial that he knew the Switzes, Benon still was not satisfied.

Police were keeping the utmost secrecy on activities of a mysterious American woman who is thought to hold the key to much of the gang's work. She has not been arrested.

Dumoulin also denied that he was in any way connected with spy activities. He admitted that at one time he was a Communist.

Parisian Owns Swords Given Gen. Jackson

Sabers, Jefferson's Gifts to Noted Army Chief, May Go to U. S.

Paris (U.P.).—Two swords of Thomas Jefferson, presented to Gen. Andrew Jackson in 1818 and 1819, are in possession of a wealthy Frenchman from Orleans, M. Barbet de Vaux.

They are only a small part of an enormous collection of Napoliana and valuable Lafayette souvenirs, but because they are unique M. de Vaux is a little undecided just what to do with them.

"The battle saber offered by President Jefferson to Gen. Jackson in March, 1818," he says, "is in a state of remarkable preservation." This presentation was made in commemoration of one of the victories over the English and Indian Creeks. On the guard of the saber is this inscription:

"In Commemoration of the Anniversary of the Battle of Horse Shoe Bend."

Another inscription on the sheath of the sword near the hilt reads:

"To Gen. Andrew Jackson, His Friend, Thomas Jefferson, March, 1818."

The sword handle is of mother-of-pearl and the head of a golden eagle. The belt accompanying it is of red velvet embroidered heavily with gold and ornamented with an elaborate gold buckle.

The sword blade bears 17 stars, the American eagle and several American symbols engraved in gold on a background of blue.

"Another sword," explained M. de Vaux, "undoubtedly belonged to Gen. Jackson, but it bears no inscription. The hunting knife, however, is magnificent and well preserved. The inscription: 'To Gen. Andrew Jackson, the Glorious Conqueror of the English and the Indian Creeks, "Redeemer and the Second Savior of the Country"—His Friend and Admirer, Thomas Jefferson, March, 1819.'"

Both of these, the sword and the knife, are mounted with a golden Indian full-length figure on the hilt of the knife, and an Indian head above a handle of mother-of-pearl on the sword.

There is the possibility that these may be presented to the American Embassy in Paris.

Radio Waves and Ripples

THERE are two things no radio executive ever will be able to reconcile.

One is the love of exclusive broadcasts, the other a fine appreciation of the importance of publicity to his enterprise. Of the total incompatibility of the two he is painfully aware.

It was just such a situation that faced WJSV minds yesterday. They arranged with the Senate Labor Committee to broadcast hearings on Senator Wagner's unionization bill Monday. Gen. Johnson was to be the bill's chief defender, with James A. Emery, Capital representative of the National Association of Manufacturers, its No. 1 opponent. And it looked very much as though the competition, N. B. C., WRC, and WMAL,, would miss the airworthy event entirely.

But how to keep a scoop and let your public know what you were doing in time to set their dials?

WJSV minds hope the bother of last-minute preparation will discourage N. B. C. engineers from entering the marble room of the Senate Office Building.

THAT bright future of Willie Huggins, a recent WJSV performer making good on the network, seemed pretty dim for a few moments the other night when an auto in which he and Edith Murray, another C. B. S. singer, were riding to a benefit show in Newark, took an unnecessarily prominent part in a collision.

Willie escaped with a sprained wrist, however, and Edith waited until the performance was over before collapsing from a painfully wrenched back.

How ship-to-shore telephone conversations are scrambled and unscrambled and other mysteries of international cable and wireless communication will be revealed in a series of C. B. S. broadcasts to begin April 5. Western Union, Postal and Mackey Wireless are all helping out.

the life of a colored bootblack in the Senate Office Building to build a series of radio dramas WRC has deemed sufficiently enlivening for broadcasting.

The series bears the title "Shuffle in the Senate," and will start a week from tonight at 7:15. George Calvert, jr., Eugene Stevens and Mrs. Grace Harmon are the cast.

We once heard a girl in a circus sideshow who could sing two parts at the same time.

We suppose Lillian Bucknam, who begins a series of weekly song recitals on N. B. C. tomorrow, is something like that.

Miss Bucknam is both a contralto and a soprano, with a range of three full octaves.

By switching to another N. B. C. network, Clara, Lu 'n' Em come into Washington again, beginning Monday at 10:15 a. m. They will broadcast throughout 1934 daily except Saturady and Sunday on National's red network (WRC, locally).

Whitecaps.

Getting Personal . . .

Pappy, Ezra, Zeke and Elton, the Westchester hillbillies, are looking for some one who can read Japanese . . . a fan recently sent them a copy of a Tokyo paper with the information that it contained a very laudatory review of their broadcasting . . . but no translation . . . it was a radio cab and Shirley Howard was in it with three minutes in which to reach the studio for her broadcast . . . as they reached the building the driver put his hand on the door and entreated: "Don't get out yet! Shirley Howard'll be on in a few minutes" . . . Ray Heatherton got his radio start when Paul Whiteman heard him singing in a Long Island tavern . . . Al Jolson again fades from the air lanes April 12, leaving the Paul Whiteman troupe to handle the Thursday night assignment alone . . . Lennie Hayton, in a recent competition, played an average of ten notes a second without a slip . . . three radio performers owe a furtherance of their careers to Rubinoff's silence . . . the first two are Patsy Flick and Teddy Bergman, whose portrayal of Rubinoff's male relatives is widening their reputations . . . the other is Frances Arms, who is billing herself as Radio's Mrs. Rubinoff . . . Al Katz is planning to vacation at his home at Newport, Ky., just about long enough to have Gov. Ruby Laffoon make him a colonel . . . Mildred Bailey probably will be glad to know that there is a Bailey Rocking Chair Manufacturing Co. at 36 Park place, New York . . . Jimmy Kemper, C.B.S. song dramatist, claims to have written the first radio continuity . . . C.B.S. after April 15 will have two Lady Esthers where it only had one before, Wayne King having signed his orchestra for Sunday night broadcasting.

Culbertson on Bridge

Slam Bidding on the High Seas.

The good ship Haiti was plowing the blue waters of the Carribean, where, in another age, richly laden Spanish galleons put on every inch of available sail to outspeed the pirate craft captained by Morgan and others of that romantic age. However, in the smokeroom of the ship there were four players who were not interested in the placid blue of the waters nor in the stories of piracy or conquest, so rich in this section of the New World. They were intent instead upon a game of Contract Bridge. The participants in the game were two gentlemen from New England—Mr. Walter Pendleton, of Boston, and Mr. Ladd, of Bristol, Conn., playing East and West against Mr. Earl N. Cutler, of Morristown, N. J., and Mr. William J. Huske, of New York City. Mr. Cutler was seated South, as Dealer, and distributed the cards as follows:

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

	♠ A J 6 5 ♡ K 10 8 6 ◇ A K J 3 ♣ 6
♠ 9 8 4 2 ♡ J 9 3 ◇ 8 ♣ K 10 9 5 2	N W E S	♠ 10 7 3 ♡ Q 5 4 2 ◇ 9 5 ♣ Q J 8 4
	♠ K Q ♡ A 7 ◇ Q 10 7 6 4 2 ♣ A 7 3

South	West	North	East
1◇	Pass	2♠	Pass
3◇	Pass	4NT(1)	Pass
5NT(2)	Pass	6◇(3)	Pass
7◇(4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—Mr. Cutler and his partner had had no discussion of methods of bidding, except that they used the Culbertson System. It was the first occasion during the session in which an opportunity to test out Slam bidding had come up, and the Convention had not been mentioned between the partners. Mr. Huske decided to test his partner's knowledge of this convention.

2—Mr. Cutler afterward explained that he had never used the Convention before in actual play, his only knowledge of it being from reading some of my articles in newspapers. Of course, his response is perfectly correct.

3—Probably North at this point should bid seven diamonds. His holding in diamonds is so strong that he can scarcely expect his partner to have strength enough to bid again, and yet, in view of the vulnerable Opening and Rebid, a Grand Slam appears extremely probable.

4—A beautiful bid on the part of Mr. Cutler. He reasons that inasmuch as he holds the King-Queen of spades, the Ace of hearts and the Ace of clubs, North's Forcing Takeout and subsequent Raise to a Small Slam in diamonds must show both the Ace and King of diamonds, in which case the Grand Slam is a laydown. Obviously the bid of the Grand Slam is correct.

Of course, there was nothing to the play of the hand. A club was opened, the adverse trumps drawn, and all 13 tricks cashed.

I have no doubt that Mr. Cutler spent an enjoyable vacation on his sea trip to the tropics, and I feel quite sure that one of the events of that trip that he will recount with as great pleasure as any other is the bidding and making of this Grand Slam contract—the first, as he stated, of his Bridge career.

Job Hunters Rush Virginia Liquor Board

Salesmen's Hearings Set; Applications Arrive by Thousands.

Richmond, March 23 (AP).—Approximately 800 applicants for employment with the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board received application forms at the board's office yesterday. Meanwhile 160 liquor salesmen are seeking interviews with the board members.

The offices, opened at noon, were thronged with job seekers all the rest of the day. Representatives of distillers, brewers and vintners camped in the ante-room hoping to present their claims to members of the board—or anyone else willing to listen.

Four stenographers, who worked late last night, were unable to do more than open thousands of letters of application which poured into the office with each mail delivery.

Dates for the hearing of liquor salesmen were announced today. The board will classify types of beverages and establish a hearing time for those offering each type.

Policies Outlined.

General policies of the board were given in a statement issued by S. Heth Tyler, chairman.

"Having been formally sworn into office," he said, "members of the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board will begin immediately to set up an organization with which to carry out the provisions of the new liquor control act.

"All major problems of the board will be passed upon by all three members; but a certain division of labor will place upon each of us certain duties. The chairman will handle the legal matters, Mr. Bullington is in charge of merchandising and Mr. Frazier will attend to organization and personnel.

No Personal Interviews.

"One of the greatest tasks before the board is the personnel set-up. We expect to announce within a few days our tentative organization plans.

"I should like to request that the public have patience and bear with the board in these early days. We are just as eager to interview certain groups as they are to see us. For the present we are forced to deny personal interviews until our work has been organized.

"Gov. Peery has given us every assistance in our work that we could possibly hope for."

Philatelists Brave Snow to Buy First Maryland Stamps

Post Staff Photos.

Approximately 500 persons, many from Washington, crowded the gymnasium of St. Mary's Seminary, which was used as a temporary post-office at St. Marys City, Md., yesterday, as the first stamps of the Maryland Tercentenary issue were sold, proving it takes more than icy roads, detours and snowfall to keep philatelists from thronging to such an event. Upper left—C. B. Eilenberger, Third Assistant Postmaster General, was kept busy, mainly by students of St. Mary's Seminary, autographing letters sent out in the first day's mail. Upper right—Postmaster William M. Mooney made the long journey to see that everything moved smoothly. Left to right—Robert Borchardt, sorting letters; Postmaster Mooney and Robert E. Fellers, superintendent, Division of Stamps. Lower left—Horace M. Grant, of Providence, R. I., drove 423 miles to purchase stamps. He is a member of the Rhode Island Philatelic Society, the oldest organization of its kind in the United States. Lower right—A portion of the crowd which purchased stamps.

Cleric Bemoans 'Smug' Religion

London Churchman Hits "Hot Water Bottle" Christians.

London (U.P.).—Many Christians in England think they can "muddle through into Heaven" according to Dr. H. A. Wilson, Bishop of Chelmsford.

The bishop described the faith of this type of Christian, whose attendance at church is neither regular nor often, as "the religion of the hot-water bottle." It means in practice, he says, that such people believe that they can comfortably cover their multitude of sins by an occasional subscription to the local hospital. But it is certainly not Christianity, the bishop declares.

This religious sentiment has been formulated into a creed by the bishop, which runs:

"I believe in God, the Father, because I feel sure there must be a God of some kind: a sort of eternal good nature and easy-going tolerance.

"I believe that Jesus Christ lived a holy life which I ought to admire, and I believe that I ought to obey the teaching of the Sermon on the Mount. I am not quit clear what it contains, but I imagine no one can really be expected to live up to it. I have great reverence for the Cross, but I do not pretend to understand what it means.

"I am not quite sure whether I believe in life everlasting, but if there is such a thing, I believe that somehow or other everything will turn out all right for everybody in the long run; at any rate I hope so. Amen."

This type of religion creates a feeling of smugness and somnolence, says the bishop, and has affected a large number of churches. It is one of the principal reasons why so many people have abandoned church-going.

Staunton Deaf School Head's Ouster Asked

Alumni State McManaway "Willfully Retarded" His Pupils.

Staunton, Va., March 23 (Spl.). Reuben Altizer, of Easton, Md., president of the Deaf Alumni Association of the Virginia School for Deaf and Blind, today laid before the school's board of visitors an "indictment and petition" asking removal of Prof. Howard M. McManaway as superintendent.

Prof. McManaway has been head of the school since 1919. One of the allegations was that he has "willfully retarded natural intellectual development" of pupils.

Prof. McManaway for the past five years has been president of the American Association for the Promotion of the Teaching of Speech to the Deaf. The alumni charge that the association controls the Volta Bureau in Washington, D. C., of which Norman McManaway, brother of the professor, is manager.

Philippi Jail Breaker Captured at Grafton

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 23 (Spl.).—Detected after he had been made a prisoner at Grafton, Albert Rosier, 25, of Bear Mountain, one of four prisoners who dug out of the Barbour County Jail at Philippi Wednesday, was taken back to Philippi today.

Rosier was captured yesterday by railroad policemen at Grafton railroad yards. A companion, believed one of the Barbour jail breakers, eluded officers.

'Ma' Ferguson Pardons Father Who Slew Daughter's Violator

"Debauchers of Womanhood" Given Warning by Texas Governor.

Austin, Tex., March 23 (AP).—Protection against "young debauchers of womanhood" was promised by Texas' woman governor, Miriam A. Ferguson, in issuing a complete pardon today to a 60-year-old father in an "honor slaying."

Gov. Ferguson lifted the two-year penitentiary sentence imposed upon J. R. Readhimer for the murder of young Stokes Campbell, allegedly the father of a child born to Readhimer's daughter. Campbell had refused to marry the girl.

In releasing Readhimer, Gov. Ferguson said:

"If he lives a thousand years, he would probably never commit another offense like this because his youngest daughter has been ruined and no reform is possible because this defendant is now in old age and punishment in the penitentiary means but little to him personally, but the support of his family, if he had to go, would but add to the humiliation which it now suffers."

"Would his pardon suppress crime declared to be one of the objects of the law?" the governor wrote. "Maybe it will. It will at least be a grave warning to these young debauchers of womanhood who run around this country seeking whom they may ruin with no attempt to keep their passion within bounds."

Gov. Ferguson said "we all believe in the letter of the law, but human nature has its limitations, and as long as young men ruin young girls in this country and refuse to protect their name from passionate disgrace, just so long will the courts of this country be full of unfortunate conditions with which I am here confronted."

Strong Drink Still Stingeth as Adder, Pupils Are Taught

Baltimore, Md., March 23 (Spl.). Even though repeal has come, Maryland continues to teach the evils of drink in her schools.

A survey today shows children in the third and sixth grades of all public schools in the State must, by law, receive instructions in the more sinister aspects of the Demon Rum.

Third grade pupils are taught: "Seldom, if ever, should there be drinking of tea or coffee, and moderation in all things is a good rule by which to live." They also learn that "dogs given alcohol play less and will not run like others. Something takes away their strength."

In the sixth grade, pupils are told: "The model specimen of human health does not use tobacco, alcohol or narcotics."

Bodies of 8 Miners Sought After Blast

Eagle Pass, Tex., March 23 (AP).—A rescue party was searching tonight for the last of eight bodies of miners killed yesterday in an explosion that shook Rosita, Coahuila, Mexico, said reports received here.

Twelve other miners were injured so seriously some probably will die. Fourteen other men escaped.

Rites at Aquia Altar Planned

"Stations of the Cross" Will Be Read Tuesday.

Aquia, Va., March 23 (Spl.).—Holy week will be observed by reading of the "Stations of the Cross" at the outdoor altar in the old Brent Cemetery here at 2 p. m. Tuesday.

The Most Rev. Andrew J. Brennan, D. D., Bishop of Richmond, has given special permission for outdoor Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament, which will be attended by the Catholic Woman's Club of Richmond and others from Richmond, Washington, Alexandria, Fredericksburg and other cities.

The Rev. Francis J. Byrne, D. D., pastor of St. Ann's Church, Ashland and managing editor of the Catholic Virginian, will read the Stations, and the Rev. Edward L. Stephens, Diocesan director of the Pontifical Society for the Propagation of the Faith in Virginia, will give benediction. Miss Mary Gill, of Richmond, has charge of decorating the altar.

Aquia, location of the first English Catholic settlement in America, became a National Catholic shrine when the Catholic Woman's Club of Richmond erected a roadside crucifix and restored the old Brent Cemetery.

British Doctor Calls Heredity Cancer Factor

Strain in Family Provides Susceptibility, Says Famous Surgeon.

London (U.P.).—A hereditary factor exists in relation to cancer, and the fact has been proved by researches in the last few years, asserts a famous British surgeon.

This momentous step forward in the study of the causes of cancer and other tumor incidence, is revealed in a book just published on the origin of the disease, by Dr. J. P. Lockhart-Mummery.

"The study of inherited factors in human beings is extremely difficult," writes Dr. Lockhart-Mummery. "In the first place there are practically no pure strains of human beings, and its practically impossible to trace accurately the pedigrees of humans for more than two generations, a period far too short to allow any very satisfactory deductions.

"Were cancer hereditary in the strict sense, it is clear that it would appear at birth and that children would be born with cancer or tumors. But even in those families in which there is a well-marked family history the condition does not develop until late in life, and the children of such families are born normal and grow to be normal adults. It is only later that the disease develops."

From this the surgeon concludes that the hereditary factor is not cancer but only a susceptibility to develop it. While this hereditary factor is of very great importance in tumor formation its exact nature remains very obscure.

"It would seem inevitable that a knowledge of the cause of cancer must materially assist in the discovery of a satisfactory means of dealing with the disease," says Dr. Lockhart-Mummery. "But this genetic theory at first sight does not seem to afford any very hopeful prospect of curing the disease by methods other than those now in use.

"We can hardly doubt that what is true of animals must also be true of human beings in this respect," he adds, and points out that it should be possible to develop a strain of human beings who are so resistant to cancer development that the disease would become so rare as to be practically nonexistent.

This idea is becoming more prevalent, according to the surgeon, and many people are beginning to think that the time has come when man should begin intelligently to control his stock as he has for centuries been doing with his domestic animals.

Idle Insurance Debate Slated

Maryland and D. C. Labor for Protection of Unemployed.

Baltimore, March 23 (Spl.).—Passage of a State unemployment insurance law for Maryland by the next session of the Legislature will probably be advocated by the Maryland and District of Columbia Federation of Labor at its annual convention May 21 in Hagerstown, it was stated here today by Joseph P. McCurdy, federation president.

Mr. McCurdy announced the unemployment insurance law will be one of the principal topics discussed at the session. The form such legislation should take, and methods of bringing about its enactment, will be debated at length, he said.

Numerous civic organizations in Maryland are backing the measure, and a bill providing for some form of unemployment insurance is virtually certain to be presented to the 1935 Legislature.

It probably will be modeled after the one defeated last year by the State Assembly, or, Mr. McCurdy said, it might be based on the Wagner-Lewis bill, now before the House of Representatives Ways and Means Committee. It would set up a Nation-wide unemployment insurance system by imposing a 5 per cent tax on the pay rolls of all firms employing ten or more persons. The revenue from such a bill is estimated at a billion dollars a year.

It is sponsored by Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, and Representative David J. Lewis, of Cumberland, from the Sixth Maryland District.

$14,000 Blaze Razes Fairfax County School

Classes Not in Session When Potter's Hill Building Burns.

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed Potter's Hill schoolhouse in Fairfax County, Va., yesterday. The school, a four-room frame structure, was located on Telegraph road near Alexandria.

School was not in session yesterday, as instructors were attending a district teachers meeting.

County Superintendent of Schools W. T. Woodson said the loss, about $14,000, was covered by insurance.

Arrangements are being made to house the 120 pupils of the school for the remainder of the school year, in the Odd Fellows Hall and the Methodist Church at Accotink.

Minnesota Income Tax Law Is Declared Valid

St. Paul, March 23 (AP).—The Minnesota State Supreme Court, in a unanimous decision, today upheld the constitutionality of a graduated State income tax law passed in 1933.

As a result of the decision, 90,000 individuals and corporations must file income tax returns, if they already have not done so, by April 15. It was estimated approximately $2,000,000 in revenue would be raised this year from the tax.

The Pearl Necklace.

One of DeMaupassant's gripping stories concerned a pathetic woman who slaved away a lifetime in an effort to pay for a pearl necklace which she had borrowed for a party, and there lost. In the end it was revealed that the lost gems were only paste. Fate was kinder to Mrs. Dewey. She died before it was revealed that what she seemed to have thought genuine was spurious.

What makes jewels valuable? Surely in the case of Mrs. Dewey's choker it was not their rarity, for they were not rare. As far as she knew, as far as her friends and family knew, they were genuine diamonds and rare pearls. Everyone who saw them admired them and agreed that there is something declasse about imitation jewelry. If the jewels had been as rare as the Kohinor, or as dangerous as the Hope diamond was said to have been, and some expert had mistakenly damned them as unreal, would they have lost their sparkle in the eyes of onlookers? It is to be feared they would.

In jewelry, in art, in business and in all human relationships, one of the hardest lessons for mankind to learn is that embodied in a very ancient proverb—the one about gold and glitter.

Congressional Ping Pong.

After bandying the independent offices appropriation bill between the Senate and the House for several weeks Congress might well ask itself whether it is legislating or merely playing ping pong. The usual legislative procedure is passage of similar bills through both houses followed by adjustment of differences in a conference. But in this instance each house appears to be trying to exceed the other in obstinate resistance to compromise.

The controversy would be understandable if any great principle were at stake. As a matter of fact, the two bills are very similar. The House insists that 29,000 veterans who were not injured as a result of their war service and therefore have no right to expect compensation from the Government should nevertheless be restored to the pensions rolls. With this attitude the Senate heartily concurs, but the upper house demands a 90 per cent restoration of former benefits, while the lower house insists upon 75 per cent. Since either plan would destroy the Administration's economy program, the sharp debate and emphatic votes on this question seem to be much ado about very little.

In casting its most recent vote the House found logic in the argument that the President would certainly veto the more liberal Senate bill, while he might approve the squandering of the mere $90,000,000 allowed in the House bill. For this thought it is indebted to the American Legion. Clever lobbyists were quick to see the advantage of securing reinstatement of 29,000 pensioners, regardless of what the rate of compensation may be. Once the sound principle behind the economy act is smashed, piece-meal restoration of the old rates should be a comparatively easy objective.

If President Roosevelt is determined to preserve the only substantial contribution he has made toward curtailment of extravagance, he has no alternative to vetoing this measure, regardless of what action the Senate may take. Congress has shifted the responsibility of upholding the principle of fair and reasonable pensions to the shoulders of the Executive. A forceful veto message would have a salutary effect upon congressional leaders who regard the issue as one for electioneering treatment.

Jay-Walking.

Three recent traffic fatalities directly traceable to "jay-walking" have focused attention on the lack of pedestrian control in Washington.

A five-car crash on the Bladensburg Pike in which 11 people were seriously injured, 2 fatally, was caused by a pedestrian carelessly crossing a dimly lighted suburban highway with gross inattention to crosswalks or the rights of motorists. Several days later a woman was instantly killed when she ran into the front of an automobile in the middle of a block on Georgia avenue. Assistant Traffic Director M. O. Eldridge points out that of the 11 traffic deaths in the first 20 days of this month several were caused by absent-minded individuals walking into the side of automobiles in motion.

The motor vehicle law specifically states that pedestrians shall be regulated by the traffic authorities of the District. It gives motor vehicles an absolute right of way between crosswalks and pedestrians the same rights at uncontrolled intersections. At controlled intersections pedestrians as well as vehicles are subject to traffic signals. Penalties for violation are enforced on the motorist, but not on pedestrians. Since the act was passed in 1926 there has not been a single conviction for "jay-walking," although in numerous cases pedestrians have been held responsible for accidents.

Only by enforcement of the regulations on both parties concerned can the hazards of "jay-walking" be impressed upon the minds of pedestrians. In a city where traffic is congested, as it is in Washington, control of pedestrians is absolutely essential if needless fatalities are to be avoided.

A Helpful Exchange.

If Japan were planning war with Russia at any time in the near future it would be most desirable, from her viewpoint, first to establish with the United States that "most peaceful and friendly relation" which Mr. Hirota says is the sincere desire of his country. His comment on the reciprocal nature of Japanese-American trade may possibly be interpreted as a suggestion of the desirability of American neutrality in the event of Far Eastern conflict.

Furthermore, if Japan intends to maintain, or to strengthen, the grip which she holds on Manchuria it is important for her to break the diplomatic boycott still exercised against the vassal state of Manchukuo. Since the United States was the leader in establishing the doctrine of non-recognition it is natural that this country should be the first to be approached, most delicately, on the subject of recognizing Manchukuo. This would seem to be what Mr. Hirota means when he asserts that there is no question between the two countries "incapable of amicable solution" provided only that "all issues pending" are approached by both parties "with a spirit of cooperation and conciliation."

Finally, it may be noted that the cordial message of the Japanese foreign minister was delivered at a time when Philippine independence is looming up as an approaching probability, and carries tacit assurances in this direction. Japan, he says, "has no intention whatever to provoke and make trouble with any other power."

In a note with so many possible implications the task of reply is difficult, to say the least. That sent under the signature of Secretary Hull is in the best traditions of American diplomacy. In casts no breath of aspersion upon motives which are doubtless as honorable as our own. It accepts at face value the gracious sentiments expressed by Mr. Hirota and practically invites a further more definite communication with regard to the settlement of outstanding issues. Among these the exclusion law, continuation of the naval treaty, and the reconciliation of the Manchurian situation with treaty provisions, stand first. "I shall," says Mr. Hull, "be glad to receive * * * any suggestions calculated to maintain and increase that friendliness and cordiality which have constantly marked * * * the relations between our two countries."

Pending such concrete suggestions, however, the Secretary is careful not to moderate the position which the United States has taken on Manchukuo, a position assumed not with any feeling of hostility to Japan but solely in defense of those treaty obligations which must be observed by all parties if any international relations are to be strengthened and improved.

The Hirota-Hull correspondence is a significant advance on the last formal exchange of notes between the two countries, just two years ago. It has not solved—it is based on admission of—unsolved issues between the two countries. The major contribution of the present exchange is the joint and convincing asseveration that these issues do not constitute grounds for ill feeling between the two countries. With this as a basis, and with mutual good will, it should not be difficult to make more concrete progress toward the elimination of all causes of dispute.

Asking The Impossible.

Representatives of the CWA and their supporters are converging upon Washington from New York and other nearby cities to urge continuance of that method of relief. One of the delegations is led by Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President in 1932, whose keen intelligence should tell him that no society, socialist or capitalist, can indefinitely afford relief schemes in which compensation to the unemployed bears no relation to the state of the national budget. Plans for Federal-State unemployment insurance, which Mr. Thomas is also reported as coming to sponsor, provide a far more constructive method of relief for those willing to work, capable of working, but unable to find work, to whom a civilization worthy of the name undoubtedly owes some responsibility.

A substantial difference between a system of unemployment insurance and the work-relief theory of the CWA is that in the former benefits are necessarily limited to amounts far below the wages obtainable in regular employment. Otherwise, any system of insurance would rapidly pass from solvency to bankruptcy. Of course, during depression periods, standards can be lowered at State expense to provide relief to those technically ineligible for benefits. But such additional relief—uncovenanted benefit, as it has been called in England—must also be kept well below current wage rates if the economic system, socialist or capitalist, is to continue to function.

Yet in the United States, where compulsory unemployment insurance used to be opposed as tending to demoralize labor, a Federal dole system of unprecedented and extraordinary subversive character has been established. The grotesque strikes among CWA workers for higher wages, and the widespread resistance to efforts to demobilize the organization, are the natural consequences of the absurd theory that the State owes its citizens competitive wages for made work on unnecessary and often uneconomic projects.

Harsh though it may seem to the sentimentalists, the destitute unemployed can not long be maintained at public expense under conditions that make them the envy of self-sustaining workers. The public credit will not support a policy of this sort, regardless of the economic system under which it is tried. And even if the theory were workable the country could not afford to risk the social disasters that come from encouraging its citizens to think that the State owes them a good living, without regard to the amount or quality of the work done in return for support.

The realistic Russians would be the first to laugh out loud at the idea that the CWA could or should be made a permanent institution in this country.

The Philippine Compromise.

In passing the modified Philippine independence bill the Senate ignored all the defects in that measure and voted to sustain the compromise worked out by President Roosevelt and Senator Quezon. The most objectionable features, which caused the Philippine Legislature to reject the measure last year, have not been changed. Careful students of the economic situation in the islands still question the possibility of establishing a stable and independent government under this bill. Yet it has been accepted by the American Government, and Senator Quezon and his associates are pledged to ask the Philippine Legislature to reverse its previous decision.

The only concession made by the Administration is not of vital importance. Military bases will not be maintained in the islands after independence has been established. But the question of naval bases is left to future negotiation. This means, of course, that the United States will have the right to maintain naval bases in the islands so long as the two governments continue in disagreement on the subject.

Vigorous objections to the economic features of the bill were raised in Manila. They would limit Philippine exports to the United States during a transition period of about ten years, but would keep Philippine ports open to American exports. No provision is made for the development of other foreign markets for the products of Filipino industry now coming duty free to this country. It is difficult to believe that the Filipinos will find this measure practicable, even though it may be approved by the Legislature, and earnest attempts may be made to carry out its provisions.

Congressional action on the independence bill aroused no enthusiasm in the islands. Indications are that the Filipinos are beginning to think much more seriously about their prospective separation from the United States. Many are dubious, and rightly so. If the Legislature accepts the bill, and the economic consequences prove disastrous, protests will be made to Washington and Congress will be morally bound to give them attention. Our liability in the islands will not be discharged by passing an inadequately considered independence measure.

Economic Research.

A year ago the National Bureau of Economic Research doubted whether its resources would permit its work to be continued beyond 1933. But fortunately the bureau's standing has received deserved recognition. Its report for 1933 states that funds have been placed at its disposal by a renewal of an existing grant and contributions from three other foundations. This will be welcome news to students who appreciate the value of a really scientific research agency.

One of the greatest temptations that confronts endowed research agencies whether in the field of economics or natural science, is the desire to get speedy results and make them immediately and conspicuously useful in the solution of practical problems. Dr. Einstein recently deplored this almost universal failing, which is especially marked in case of the social sciences.

Prof. Wesley C. Mitchell, director of the Bureau of Economic Research, emphasizes the fact that its studies are not undertaken with a view to solving any specific social problems of the moment but to provide the information and data upon which those engaged in such pragmatic undertakings may draw. Consequently, the bureau "can render service as readily to proponents of the New Deal, as to the champions of rugged individualism," because its studies of national income, business cycles, prices, production, &c., are designed "to establish relationships among interconnected processes."

In an age of propaganda masquerading often under the name of research there is need for an association of scholars representing no particular school of theorists, and no single social class or special interest.

IN ANTICIPATION of the forthcoming elections to the Reichstag, the German nationalist program made bids for votes from those who desired the reestablishment of a "Christian, social and monarchial state" and who were opposed to the stigma of German war guilt and the Versailles treaty. Paper Money and the Bonus.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On behalf of the destitute World War veterans and their families, I wish to take exception to the fears recently expressed in regard to the paper money settlement of the adjusted service compensation. If we take into consideration the fact that industrial recovery can not be achieved without purchasing power in the hands of the masses, how is it to be accomplished without some new form of getting a medium of exchange into circulation?

The payment of the bonus can be accomplished in the following manner: Congress or the President could authorize and issue Government money orders (checks) for the free use of existing currency in one amount sufficient to pay the veterans' bonus claims.

Congress or the President could promulgate a National mandate to the banks of the country, directing them to honor said orders, by cashing them or by accepting them for deposit. JOSEPH BRENNAN.

From a Victim of "Economy."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read the letter in The Post entitled "Lopsided Economy," written by a service-disabled emergency officer, who receives $41.25 a month in compensation for a ruined life.

Is it not outrageous that millionaires, high-salaried Government employes, prominent doctors and even members of Congress with little service and slight disability should receive generous retirement pay while other officers totally disabled in France are barred from this list, no matter what their need, service or disability, merely because they were too seriously disabled to look after their own interests or too patriotic to ask aid until they were in actual need?

Two Pertinent Questions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Have we privileged classes in the United States, and has equality before the law been scrapped under the New Deal? Under the economy law all rights of hospitalization were taken from veterans except those whose disabilities are of unquestionable service connection. But, according to press reports, the 18-year-old son of the President goes to the Naval Hospital for an operation for appendicitis. His youth is assurance that he could not have had military service of any nature. Members of Congress, Cabinet officers, other high officials and workers under the CCC, go to veterans' hospitals at pleasure, while the vast majority of veterans are denied this privilege. If a member of the CCC is killed his widow gets a pension of $45 per month, while the widow of a general officer of the Army who may have had a long and distinguished service and lost his life in combat can not get over $30 per month. Verily it appears to be a disadvantage and a handicap to have served as a soldier in defense of our country. Well may it be said: "Superfluous lags the veteran on the stage of life." VETERAN.
Washington, March 20.

Against Lynching.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of March 20 on "Not a Question of Law" again displays your broad patriotic purpose and sanity of judgment. All right-minded Americans will agree that an effective remedy for lawlessness and lynching would contribute more to the honor, security and perpetuity of American institutions than all of the programs of material recovery upon which the Nation's attention now is focused. The Costigan-Wagner bill is well intended. Its advocates are utilizing it as a rallying point about which to arouse public sentiment rather with any reasonable hope that it will be enacted into law, or that it would be an effective remedy if so enacted. To this end their purpose is praiseworthy. In the accomplishment of its noble end, the bill would be more effective in its failure than in its passage. Lynching is not prevalent in any other portion of the civilized world. It is prevented not by law, but by sentiment. Fortunately for the welfare of the Nation the requisite public sentiment is being developed in all parts of the country. KELLY MILLER.

A Duluth Manufacturer Corrects Our Story on "The Poor Little Fellow"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Upon my return to Washington from New York, where I have been for two weeks endeavoring to persuade the code authority of the iron and steel industry to correct an injustice which threatens my business existence, I note an article in The Post by Raymond Clapper under the caption of "Poor Little Fellow." In it reference is made to the Federal Trade Commission report to the Senate which seems so amusing to NRA officials that "they took the afternoon off to laugh."

As president of the Diamond Calk Horseshoe Co., which is referred to in the article, I am wondering if that isn't what the NRA has been doing for some time. From my standpoint and my 300 employes and those dependent upon them, to say nothing of its larger aspects, this is no joking matter, as Mr. Clapper will "discover" if he will get his facts straight.

If he had read the commission's report instead of getting his information from the industry men in the NRA I suspect he would have seen that the "Poor Little Fellow" with whom the commission sympathized was my company and not the Minnesota Steel Co.

Assuming that the New York paper correctly reported what Senator Borah said in the Senate recently as to what is contained in the report, it would not have been necessary for "NRA headquarters" to look up the "Duluth Steel Mill situation" to "discover only one mill there owned by the Minnesota Steel Co., a subsidiary of U. S. Steel." But Mr. Clapper ought, also, to get some other facts straight. One of these is that it is not true that "this mill was established to manufacture wire and wire fencing for the Northwest farm region." It did not begin to manufacture those products until seven years later, during all of which time our company was buying billets and merchant bars from it and the greater part of which period we enjoyed the allowance of $5 per ton which the code took away from us last summer.

Therefore, it is not true that "during the depression the Mill Co. knocked off $5 per ton for the Horseshoe Co. man in order to permit him to compete with established horseshoe manufacturers." Instead of being a mill "established to manufacture wire and fencing for the Northwest farm region" and having only "one customer" for merchant bars, it has a wire finishing capacity of but 97,600 tons, while the bar capacity is 120,000 tons.

My complaint is that under the code we are now required to pay Chicago plus for these bars, or $6.60 a ton more than Chicago price, while as much as 50 per cent of that production has been shipped to Chicago and beyond, where the steel company gets $13.20 per ton less than we have to pay at Duluth. By contrast, the steel company under the code, sells the same steel in the form of wire and wire nails at prices which are never more than $1 per ton in excess of the Chicago price.

This is plainly discrimination against us and in favor of Chicago and if permitted to continue will, within a short time, force us to close our plant and confiscate the greater part of our investment. We have been trying to persuade the code authority and NRA since August to change this situation. Every day's delay means a dissipation of our assets and if nothing is to be done about it we may as well quit now.

The commission's report did not draw "a sorrowful picture" of the plight of a U. S. Steel Corporation subsidiary in Duluth. The mill referred to was obviously the manufacturing plant of the Diamond Calk Horseshoe Co. Now let the NRA boys laugh that off, if they can.

OTTO SWANSTROM, President.

Gems From Prison.

If the talk of a gangster and the words of a poet were scrambled, it is hard to say which would yield the larger number of poetic phrases. Does this sound as though written in jest? A list of slang terms used in prison, published in the current American Speech, offers many a gem for collectors of poetic figures; diamonds in the rough, they might be called. Leaving aside the question whether these are genuine specimens of prison slang—and some of them sound as though they may not be found outside the covers of a crime novel—it is instructive to observe how faithful to the muse of poetry is much that the pickpocket, the swindler or the bank robber says in the course of his trade.

One of the examples compiled by J. Louis Kuetha, of Johns Hopkins University Library, is the word "tears" for pearls. There is as much poetry in this as in such an image from Shakespeare as "Those are pearls that were his eyes." Another term from the cells is "sunshine," meaning gold. The phrase "last brightening" is defined in the criminal's thesaurus as "yesterday morning." It might have come from Shelley. A gangster is "hot" when he is wanted by the police. Shakespeare wrote "how like a winter my absence has been." Here we see merely a reversal in seasons. The criminal who says "vine" for a suit of clothes is no less poetic than Campion was when he wrote "There is a garden in her face." When contemporary poetry of the school of T. S. Eliot has wearied of the search for phrases among old Australian ballads or among the verses of medieval Spanish poets it may turn with profit to the cell blocks at Sing Sing and Great Meadow.

Those Who Go Plain.

Postoffice, Saturday.

So seldom does the magazine Time make an error that one slip on its part also makes correction irresistible. Recording an unusual New York visit of certain people from Lancaster County, Pa., Time says their womenfolk wear lace caps.

No, no! And again no! These followers of Menon Simons, the Teuton quietist (1492-1552), are fundamentally against all vain display. Their women wear plain linen caps and would consider lace headgear Babylonian.

Time's mistake is just a new evidence of how ignorant we Americans can be of one another. It raises the question: What are the Pennsylvania-Dutch, anyhow? The question is emphasized by the late reports of "hexing"—from German Hexe (Witch) as a pastime in their communities.

* * * *

Well, to begin with, the Pennsylvania-Dutch are not Dutch. They are Americans, mostly of the sixth or seventh generation. Many are descended from Bavarian or Alsatian ancestors. Some spring from Swiss forbears.

After the Reformation, various European states oppressed citizens who wanted more reform than the reformers supplied. There were drownings and hangings, but exile had become the most popular punishment when Penn founded his Quaker colony in America. Unable to get enough Friends for it, he conducted through Central Europe an advertising campaign not dissimilar to that of modern steamship companies.

There were spiritual children of those "slaughtered Saints" of whom Milton sung. There were Waldenses, from whose modern settlement in Rome the Catholic king draws his private servants. There were Moravians whose transatlantic venture was backed by Count Zinzendorf. And there were those species of Anabaptists known as Dunkards ("Dippers"), Menonites and Amish. On the whole they had much in common with the Quakers among whom they went to live—notably the doctrine of nonresistance.

* * * *

What they were in the days of sailing vessels and rare stage coaches, a large majority—cultivating the farms of their fathers—remain today. They have definitely, as they say, "gone plain:" adopted the plain clothes and tenets of their sects forever. The few reverters revert entirely, to Rome and its Catholicism, to stir older Constantinople and its Orthodoxy. Not many pause upon the intervening Protestant stepping-stones.

Take the Amish:

They are known to their immediate neighbors as "The Beardy Folk," because, although none of their men would cultivate the once worldly mustache, all of the mature males have beards. Their clothes are held together by hooks-and-eyes, because "buttons is a wanity." They wear high boots, these men, under long brown trousers; they wear shovel-hats, brown homespun coats and waistcoats cut in clerical fashion; and as soon as a boy-baby is out of dresses, he is dressed precisely like his pop.

The women affect poke-bonnets whereunder are tight linen caps, like those of their Menonite sisters, tied beneath the chin and retained indoors. Over their shoulders, falling nearly to the waist, is a sort of kerchief of the same simple material as the dress. This last is a model of rigid severity, though nowadays it moves to brighter colors than of yore. And the little girl is dressed precisely like her mom.

The Amishman will tolerate no lightening-rods upon his house; he often raises tobacco—pretty good tobacco, too—but he sells it. He doesn't use it. He hires no servants, even on his wide farmlands: each Amish farmer helps his brothers with their crops. He may submit to military service when a draft demands it, but he won't go to law, and he seldom votes.

* * * *

"Though not a Pennsylvania-Dutch quietist," the late Justice William Strong once said, "I haven't lived among those good people for nothing. I have been a practicing lawyer, a judge of a common pleas court, a judge of the State Supreme Court, and now I am a member of the United States Supreme Court; but nothing that anybody could do to me would get me to go to law."

The sole instance of a heavy Amish vote occurred when, before the last Congressional election of his second term, President Wilson rather insistently appealed to the country to return a Democratic Congress as an indorsement of his Administration. One Amishman thus explained why his co-religionists then went to the polls and voted as Republicans:

"Us, we don't hold by wotin'; but we don't hold neither by no President' giffin' us orders how we'd ought to wote. That feller Wilson yet, talkin' about our patriotism. We voted!"

* * * *

Not that these "Dutch," or the quietists among them, are a laughing matter. They don't deserve the caricatures drawn by such novelists as Pennsylvania-Dutch Helen Martin. They have been better presented by Elsie Singmaster and George Shock.

* * * *

Finally, we bid you disbelieve the fictional figures of their women as oppressed and broken-spirited wives. In the days when Pennsylvania chose Pennsylvanians, not men from Connecticut, to govern her, the wife of one of her greatest governors was typical. She had done Trojan service in the election; when the returns began to make victory certain, her youngsters asked:

"Mom, will we all be governors now?"

"No," she assured them—"only me an' Pop."

That tradition, at least, is still honored at Harrisburg.

I DON'T know why I should be moved to present an opera this morning, but here it is, the opera entitled "Lemme Go!"

The scene is the Bamboo Room of the Willard Hotel, in the Nation's Capital, on a snowy afternoon in March, 1934. The revolution has triumphed, the old order has gone. A dictatorship of the proletariat has been set up. As the curtain rises young liberals, workers of the NRA, consuls and proconsuls are sitting at tables sipping sherry, dancing and discussing the latest news of the Government. A painting on the wall depicts America trying to recover and the NRA holding onto its leg. America is saying "Lemme Go!" That's where the opera gets its name.

BARGERON.

Josef, the jolly head waiter, appears singing:

"Another decree from the White House, my comrades; another decree from, &c."

The customers chorus:

"Oh, what is it, Josef? Oh, what is it?"

Whereupon Josef reads the decree directing the populace to continue drinking sherry except in the principality of Massachusetts, where the people shall be governed by the separate decrees of Prince Jimmie.

The customers chorus:

"It is sherry we shall drink then, it is sherry we shall drink." And they all raise their sherry glasses. Rex Welltug, a young administrator and one of the merriest fellows of the new order, gets up and does a rotzky, or whatever that dance is where the Russians squat down and shuffle their feet and pitch knives into the floor.

• • • •

Suddenly, a jingle of sleigh bells is heard outside. Natalie, a fair maiden of the old order—she was the daughter of a banker—heavily shawled, drives up in a model T Ford. It is displaying the Blue Eagle and grinning to itself. Two Chevrolets try to attack it but the constabulary holds them back.

Natalie looks quickly to the left and right, then goes quietly into the Bamboo Room and takes a seat at a table way over in a dark corner. What is she doing? She is coming there to meet her lover, a Young Republican, who, as they say in Ireland, is on the run, that's what she is doing.

A Tiller of the Soil appears leaving mud tracks everywhere he moves. He is a big, husky fellow with an honest face. He sings:

"Oh, they've taken his pigs and now they're after his cows."

He scatters a bag of kopeks on the floor. The waiters and customers view him with more respect.

"But they gave me these in return," he sings, and the crowd choruses:

"But they gave him those in return."

• • • •

"Oh, dear," she said, "why did you risk coming here today?"

He sings: "Did you ever see a dream walking?" She sings: "Let's fall in love." They hold hands and look passionately into each other's eyes.

Now, from outside, there comes a clanking of spurs and a rattling of sabers. All eyes turn toward the door. Natalie and her lover tighten their handclasp.

Four deputy administrators swagger in, followed by a squad of troopers.

"There he is," they sing, pointing directly at Natalie's lover, "there he is. Oh, there he is; oh, there he is troopers arrest that man!"

The troopers go over and tear the lover, a fellow named Henry, who was the son of a business man in the old order, from Natalie's tearful embrace. As they take him away, Natalie sings:

"Good-by, my lover, good-by!"

Natalie arises slowly to her feet. Her head is in a whirl. She struggles out to the street and collapses in the snow. Four CWA workers pick her up and then strike for more pay. Curtain!

Heavy Water May Contain Lost Key To Eternal Youth

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 23 (AP).—Ponce de Leon's fountain of youth will turn into an odd chemical reality made of the new "heavy water" when the American Chemical Society meets next week.

The search in this recently discovered chemical for medicinal remedies new to science, and creation in many laboratories of new substances from it will be discussed in an all-day symposium.

The idea that it also holds the key to youth as Ponce de Leon dreamed of Florida's fabled waters, comes from Ingo W. D. Hackh and E. H. Westling of the College of Physicians and Surgeons School of Dentistry, San Francisco. It has been found already that living things tend to store heavy water, getting it in minute amounts from all ordinary water.

Also that heavy water slows down chemical reactions. In the body, the San Franciscan suggest, this would account for the sluggishness of protoplasm during senility.

Spencer Tracy Guarded After Kidnap Threat

Hollywood, March 23 (AP).—Spencer Tracy, film star, has been under police guard for a month as a result of a kidnap-extortion plot, detectives disclosed tonight.

They said Tracy received a letter February 23 demanding $8,000 under threats of kidnaping him, his two children, or a young actress with whom he has been seen since his separation from his wife last summer. Police would not disclose identity of the actress.

Chicago Judge Balks At Racket Dismissal

Chicago, March 23 (AP).—Chief Justice Philip J. Finnegan refused in criminal court today to end the 11 weeks old racket trial with a directed verdict of acquittal.

The defense motion to dismiss the 16 trade leaders, attorneys and economists alleged to have plotted domination of four industries was refused.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

"WE LONG ago discovered," wrote the editors of the American Spectator in October, 1933, the first anniversary of their journal, "that Queen Anne was dead."

What they meant was that they had given up all "crusades, cure-alls and side-shows." If they must have a program, it was only to offer opinion given with vigor and without dogma. Nothing could be simpler, apparently, than the utmost catholicity of taste.

It seems to me that the editors made a very good thing of this scission of the Gordian knot. For a program in the formal sense, decked out with "isms" and "ologies," would be months, if not years, in the jelling among such diverse gentlemen as George Jean Nathan, Ernest Boyd, Theodore Dreiser, Sherwood Anderson, Eugene O'Neill and Branch Cabell. I dare say it couldn't be done. So they agreed to disagree, and the upshot is one of the three or four most constantly interesting periodicals in the country.

• • • •

The editors have gathered the best bits of the first year into a fat volume: "The American Spectator Year Book" (Stokes, $2.75) holding 65 essays, articles and stories. Somehow, the book has the air of a benefit show. More or less distinguished literary figures wait their turn, then step forward and say their piece. You can almost hear them champing in the wings. But it's pleasantly informal, and very lively.

Thomas Beer meets Lytton Strachey for five minutes and encounters "wit, humility, and a desire for justice to the obscure," all over the color of a book cover. In another piece, Mr. Beer takes a slap at Ernest Hemingway. Joseph Wood Krutch remarks wisely that Rome was three or four hundred years in falling. Thomas Craven speaks up for the artist as a boor. Robert Linn very cheerfully flays Robinson Jeffers and William Faulkner. Branch Cabell is appalled that people collect his books as erotica. Jim Tully calls on Arnold Bennett and has little good to say of him. Theodore Dreiser terms Booth Tarkington "sweet sixteen and love everlasting," but admits for publication Mr. Tarkington's piece on why George Ade is a bachelor.

Most of the book leans on personality chatter. Even then there is point. Other articles appraise British journalism, Southwestern culture, American criticism, and the South Seas as paradise, all with a great deal of meat to the pound of words. You're sure to find something to your taste in this Irish stew of literary tidbits.

"The Horizon of Experience: A Philosophy for the Modern Man" (Norton, $3.50) turns its back on current philosophies of pessimism. C. Delisle Burns, a British scholar, admits we are in a period of dissolution, but he maintains that we can not seek refuge in an old order, that we must and can go on to new horizons in morality, religion and the arts. "The last test of the excellence of a tradition," he writes, "is the power it gives to pass beyond it." The wording of the book is rather heavy and dusty, but some good things are said.

The first bartender's manual in the United States, written about 1860 and enlarged in 1882, now appears in a 1934 edition. Harry Johnson mixed drinks for 40 years; in 1869 he won the National championship. His counsel on everything from a blue blazer to a Duke of Norfolk punch ought still to be sound. In the early pages of the book he goes at length into the practical conduct of a bar; the flavor of the days when a barman got $15 a week is all there. Illustrations, vintage 1880, add a curious charm to the book—"Harry Johnson's Bartender's Manual" (Graham & Co., Newark, $1).

Radclyffe Hall relates five assorted stories in "Miss Ogilvy Finds Herself" (Harcourt Brace, $2.50). Only the first touches the theme of "The Well of Loneliness." They're all stilted, pretentious and unconvincing.

• • • •

Anne Green, breezy sister of the dour Julian Green, has written another tale of a Southern girl in Paris—"Fools Rush In" (Dutton, $2.50)—full of romantic adventure and bright dialogue. It's so obviously by the author of "The Selbys" that you'll be thinking you read it before. But I don't see why anybody should mind that.

Henry W. Taft, one of New York's leading lawyers, pokes fun at psychological tests in court and suggests a number of court reforms, among them the limited admission of hearsay evidence. "Witnesses in Court" (MacMillan, $1.60) should interest the profession. Laymen will go back to Francis Wellman's great book, "The Art of Cross-Examination."

If you haven't read enough about the Nazis, here's a book that ought to cap the climax. Pierre van Paassen and James Waterman Wise have edited a symposium which leaves few bones in the German closet. "Nazism: An Assault on Civilization" (Smith & Haas, $2.50) gives the views of Al Smith, Dorothy Thompson (Mrs. Sinclair Lewis), John Haynes Holmes, Rabbi Wise, Bernard S. Deutsch (president of the Board of Aldermen in New York), Ludwig Lewisohn, Miriam Beard (daughter of Charles and Mary Beard) and others.

Miss Beard's analysis of the deletions in the English edition of Hitler's "My Battle" is especially interesting. Some 158,400 words were left out—the meat of his attack on Anglo-Saxon sensibilities. Miss Beard supplies enough of the omissions to make them quite understandable.

The book covers every angle of the Nazi movement. If you have time for only one book on Hitlerism, read this.

Eugene O'Neill's Best Play.

Eugene O'Neill is not only the foremost living American playwright, he is the best dramatist in our country's history. His first important play, "Beyond the Horizon," is still one of his best for acting purposes. When I was on the Pulitzer Prize committee, I voted for "Anna Christie" as the best play of that year; it received the prize, and I have never regretted the choice.

I have myself a very high opinion of O'Neill's latest play, although it was not admired by most of the professional critics, and was taken off after a comparatively short run. This is the religious drama, "Days Without End." I do not think it absolutely proves that he wrote it as a confession of his own faith, but it is sympathetic to Christian belief, and it is certainly true that he believes that a religion of some kind is essential to civilization.

"Lazarus Laughed" is a very beautiful drama, but is not well adapted to the stage. "Dynamo" seems to me a failure from every point of view. I am inclined to think that "Strange Interlude," both from the literary and the theatrical point of view, is his most effective play. I dislike its abnormality and many of the scenes seemed to me both repulsive and more than improbable. Yet here is a play that begins at 5 o'clock and with an intermission lasts until 11. There is not a dull moment from beginning to end. And it does not depend for its success on the actors; for second time I saw it the cast was entirely different, yet I found the play just as thrilling. Therefore, in answer to a request, I vote for "Strange Interlude" as O'Neill's best play.

Assuredly his most charming comedy is the one now running in New York, which I have already mentioned in this column. This is "Ah, Wilderness!" and it illustrates two things; the immense versatility of the author and his uncanny knowledge of stagecraft.

The bride is the daughter of George Webb Frey, actor and theatrical agent, known professionally as George Webb, from whom Miss Ralston was divorced a few weeks ago.

'Muscle Men' Hired By Chicago Firms, Inquiry Informed

Chicago, March 23 (AP).—"Muscle men" are employed in corporate society, a Congressional committee investigating Federal receiverships, was told today, as well as by Gangland.

Elliott R. Elliott, attorney for the Pacific States Life Insurance Co., testified that the head of his company, William L. Vernon, of Denver, Colo., told him he had been threatened with "trouble" if the company persisted in its attempt to obtain the receivership business of the Security Life Insurance Co. of America.

The committee received from Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson a note saying he would appear before the committee soon to answer questions about his handling of receiverships.

Receiverships handled by Judge Wilkerson include those of the Chicago Traction, the Milwaukee road, the Illinois Life Insurance, and the Daniel Boone Woolen Mills, Gerard Trust and American Bond and Mortgage Co.

In those cases alone, George Cummerow, chief investigator for the committee, said, more than $6,000,000 in fees to masters, receivers, attorneys and others were distributed.

France Obtains Fort in Syria For Monument

Erected by Crusaders, It Is Example of Middle Ages Architecture.

Paris (U.P.).—France has just paid 1,000,000 francs to obtain for preservation as a national monument the outstanding example of French military architecture of the Middle Ages. Paradoxically, the fort is not in France, but in Syria.

A veritable Carcassonne of the Near East, the citadel which is being saved from eventual ruin as the result of lengthy negotiations by the government is known as the "Crac of the Knights." The name is derived from "karak," old Syrian term for a fortified emplacement.

The Crac once was called the "Key to the Christian World," but for centuries has been inhabited by Lebanon shepherds, 530 of whom lost their home when the Alaouite government consented to its official restitution to France.

Dominates Mountain Pass.

History of the Crac is coeval with that of the Crusades. Its site was strategic long before erection of the elaborate, triple-wall fortification which from a height of 2,100 feet dominates the Amarich mountian pass leading from the sea to Damascus.

Wrested from the Kurds by Raymond de Saint-Gilles in 1099, the pass was fortified and constituted a key post for the defense of the Christian states set up as a result of the first crusade. The masterpiece of fortification, however, was evolved and executed by the Knights of Malta, who took charge of the citadel in 1143.

Against this Troy of the Dark Ages broke impotently the fury of the Half-Moon and Star. The fanatics of Nour-ed-Din, the scimitar-wielding cavaliers of Saladin and the blackamoors of Beibers were unable to reduce this aerie, whose regular garrison consisted of 2,000 men and which spread over two hectares of ground.

Once Fell by Ruse.

In 1271, however, Beibers besieged the Crac for 30 days, at the end of which he counterfeited an order from the Count of Tripoli instructing the garrison to surrender. By this ruse he gained possession of the Crusaders' most famous fortress.

From then on the history of the Crac declined. Even as the Parthenon and the Roman Circus of Nimes, the site was invaded by natives and their flocks. An official report to the ministry of Fine Arts by Paul Deschamps, director of the Trocadero Museum, said:

"Commissioned in 1927 to verify the plan of the Crac and the possibility of saving it from complete ruin, I was able to open up, among other things, a hall 120 meters long, eight wide and ten high. With the help of infantry, we carried away 50,000 tons of manure. . . ."

Reclamation work, under the auspices of the Ministry of Fine Arts and the Historical Monument fund, will be undertaken immediately, and it is hoped that by next summer the Crac of the Knights—home of fighting monks for 160 years or more—will be ready to receive the invasion of tourists.

The Once Over

INTERVIEW WITH A FIRST ROBIN.

Q.—Who are you?

A.—I'm the First Robin.

Q.—You look all shot to pieces.

A.—If you'd been through what I've been through trying to get here this year you'd look shot to pieces.

• • • •

Q.—You act awfully jittery. What's the trouble?

A.—I'm still afraid I'm here too soon for my own good.

Q.—If you're so full of misgivings why do you come back so soon anyhow?

A.—It's a family tradition. It's been a custom for generations for the First Robin to show up long before good sense would permit him to do so. Sometimes I wish I had been born a bluebird or an oriole.

Q.—Why?

A.—You never hear any nonsense about the First Bluebird or the First Oriole. They show up when they get darned good and ready. You don't catch a bluebird arriving on any set schedule or letting the newspapers run his life for him.

Q.—You consider being a robin instead of a bluebird a distinct handicap then?

A.—It's a grave misfortune. Other birds can stay South as long as they want to and escape newspaper attacks. They can play safe without running the risk of editorial criticism. They wait until they know it's warm up North before they even think of returning. But with us robins it's different. We no sooner get South before we have to think of the return trip. If I don't show up around the end of March there's a public scandal.

• • • •

Q.—Why don't you rebel?

A.—I'm thinking seriously of it, but you know how hard it is to upset a custom. The whole robin family would be in for bitter denunciation all along the line.

Q.—Have you thought of your rights under the New Deal?

A.—Yes. Some of the boys were talking about that on the way South last autumn. We thought of just holding out and letting the meadow lark or the yellow-hammer be the official harbinger of spring and the heck with it.

Q.—Why didn't the idea go through?

A.—Oh, you know how it is; some of the birds like the publicity. But one more tough winter like this and I'll quit. Say, do you notice anything?

Q.—That sort of damp, cold feeling? It feels like snow.

A.—It is snow. So long!

• • • •

A.—To Washington.

Q.—What for?

A.—For a new operating code for First Robins.

Letters From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Daughter

By Robert Quillen

My dear Louise:

Yesterday afternoon, being full of education and impudence, you informed me that my indigestion results from fasting. Eating too little, you explained, had weakened my stomach and taken away its ability to do a man's work.

If I neglected to thank you for the lesson, I do so now. It will serve to point a moral.

I suppose all literate people know that a muscle's strength is developed by use. Even the heart muscles grow weak for want of exercise, and then a man says he has "lost his wind."

But muscles aren't the only things that grow flabby for want of use. Character is another.

Whatever character may be, it is something that grows strong under the burden of responsibility, and for want of responsibilities becomes weak and worthless.

Find a person who has no sense of responsibility and you have one whose character is mush.

Find one who has a sense of responsibility and you have one who grows to match his burdens. His sense of duty becomes a habit, and habit is the framework of character.

You know a typical middle-class family of five people—one good provider and four good consumers. I mean "Slim" and his tribe.

Well, "Slim" has a sense of responsibility. He didn't have much of it when he was led to the altar, but he accumulated it as he accumulated a family.

Now the habit of thinking about and for others has become second nature. Because he feels responsible he is the one who remembers when taxes are due, notices a dripping faucet, calls for prudence at the first symptom of a cold, thinks of the iodine when a finger is cut, remembers to order coal—in short, thinks of everything and does everything to keep his house in order.

And the other four, spoiled for want of burdens and duties, live in a pleasant dream world—utterly irresponsible and thoughtless and helpless. They never worry. They think the Lord will provide—meaning "Slim."

The result is that "Slim" is a tower of strength in any emergency and the others can't stand alone. If the house got afire they would merely stand and howl. They can't think, except of themselves.

Find a set of responsibilities, my dear. Adopt a flock of them. In no other way can you develop the character that makes fine womanhood. Love, DAD.

G. O. P. Sounds Keynote Flays New Deal Acts

Senator Hastings Scores NRA, Money Policy as "Straight-Jacket."

In a bitter attack on the Roosevelt Administration, Senator Hastings, Delaware, chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, yesterday indicated that major issues in this year's election will be the air-mail contracts, the pending tariff bill, the NRA, the "New Deal" monetary policy and the Administration's lavish expenditures.

Arising to reply to a speech made in Washington earlier in the week by Postmaster General Farley, Senator Hastings compared, item by item, the Democratic platform and the activities of the Administration in each field.

The Republican chairman contended the NRA had put the business of the country in "a straitjacket" with the "result that capital and labor are at each others throats and the consumer is paying more for the things he buys."

Trade Plan Flayed.

He was followed by Senator Metcalf (Republican), Rhode Island, who flayed the Administration reciprocal trade tariff bill, now pending in the House. He said the bill provided for "a drastic abdication of the power of Congress" and at conclusion of his speech had the clerk read excerpts from the minority report of the Finance Committee in 1929 on the Hawley-Smoot act.

This report, signed by the Democratic members of the committee, who, with one exception, still are in the Senate, sharply criticized the flexible clause of that tariff act as unconstitutional and an improper delegation of authority by Congress.

Senator Long (Democrat), Louisiana, applauded those views, the first open indication that the Democrats will be divided when the tariff issue reaches the Senate.

Meanwhile, Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, one of those who signed the 1929 report, in a statement he sent through the Associated Press to the Rome (Ga.) News-Tribune declared that "the hope of the future lies in the maintenance of more liberal trade policies."

Senator George held that the policy of "extreme Nationalism will tend to dry up our industries as well as general agriculture in the long run." He added that "we cannot take care of our debt, public and private, unless we turn away from the doctrine of extreme Nationalism to which we lately have become so slavishly devoted.

Charge Platform Failures.

Senator Hastings' speech frankly was a political one, excused by him on the ground that the Farley political speech had been inserted into the Congressional Record. It was his contention the Democrats had failed to fulfill their platform promises regarding Federal expenditures, "a sound currency," the tariff, unemployment relief, the anti-trust laws and Government interference with business.

Taking cognizance of the tribute paid by Farley to his predecessor as party chairman, John J. Raskob, Senator Hastings said any tribute to Raskob was well deserved but that "I dare say John Raskob, with whose political views I am familiar, would not approve of 5 per cent of what this Administration has done—he is in the very class that Mr. Farley condemned."

During his speech Hastings flayed cancellation of the air-mail contracts, contending it was done for the "prestige of the New Deal," and that Farley did not know what he was doing. He quoted parts of the Postmaster General's testimony before the Black committee to substantiate this view.

"Front!"

Bellhop Inherits 5 Hotels and $250,000.

Los Angeles, March 23 (AP).—The sound of a bell and "Boy! Front!" no longer will bring Ray D. Cremona hurrying to the counter.

He will not have to act as a bellhop, a job he held for eight years in Hollywood. He will be too busy managing five hotels in Italy, France and Austria, to say nothing of adding to a personal bank account a quarter of a million dollars.

Cremona and his wife left today for New York from where they will sail on the Italian liner Rex for Europe to claim his share of the estate of his father, Arthur H. Cremona, who died recently at the Hotel Ritz, Merona, Italy, one of the five hostelries he owned. A brother and sister also share in the estate.

Former Yale Dean Talks at California U.

Los Angeles, March 23 (AP).—Gov. Wilbur L. Cross of Connecticut, former dean of the Yale Graduate School, told the students and faculty of the University of California at Los Angeles today that "Federal control has become necessary in order to save business, and, in fact, to save the whole capitalistic state from disruption."

His address was the feature of charter day exercises observing the university's sixty-sixth anniversary.

"The new cardinal maxim of economic society is control," the Governor asserted, referring to the National Recovery Administration. "Fierce competition in the industries, for instance, threatened to reduce business to chaos."

Billie Possum Moves Again

WHEN Billie got to going to Mrs. Moo Cow every day for milk, she didn't have so much for Mr. Man and his wife, and they wondered what was the matter. One Sunday when Blackie had company for dinner he wanted so much ice cream that he got Billie to take two buckets to bring milk in, and so Mrs. Moo Cow didn't have but just a little bit left for Mr. Man, and then Mr. Man knew somebody was stealing Mrs. Moo Cow's milk.

Next day Mr. Man came down to the pasture before it was light, and before Mrs. Moo Cow was up, and he climbed up in the persimmon tree and waited to see what was going to happen. Just as the sun was peeping up out of the trees over towards Uncle Joe's house, Mrs. Moo Cow came up the path from her bed down by the spring, where she slept most of the time till the weather got so cold or rainy that she had to go to her house, and she went right to the persimmon tree, and all the way she seemed to be looking for somebody. She kept right on till she got to the tree, and then when she didn't see anything of Billie, she threw her head up and said, "Moo-ah," three times, which was the way she called him. Billie had been out late the night before, and so had overslept himself, but when Mrs. Moo Cow called him he woke up and got his milk bucket and came gal'oping towards the tree.

It was a mighty pretty foot race.

When Mr. Man saw Billie coming with that bucket he knew what had been going with Mrs. Moo Cow's milk; so when Billie got most up to the tree Mr. Man broke a limb off and slipped down to the ground as fast as he could, and Billie would tell you today that there was a mighty pretty foot race by Mr. Man and a scared possum across that field. But Billie could outrun Mr. Man, and he threw his bucket down and did a sure-enough skeedaddle to the tree where his house was, and so before Mr. Man got there Billie was away up in his house, and out of reach of Mr. Man. And he kept as still as a mouse until Mr. Man stopped quarreling, and he heard him go away. Then he crawled to his door and peeped out, and he saw Mr. Man running toward home.

"Aha," Billie said to himself, "I'll bet he is going for his axe so he can cut down my tree and catch me, so I had better get my things and get away from here." So he rolled up his kitchen things and all those rabbit skins Blackie had been bringing him up in his sheepskin, and climbed down his tree and started for Blackie's house.

Mr. Man's Mad.

Mr. Man came back in a hurry with his axe and his gun, and began cutting Billie's house down. He thought Billie was still up there and was sure he would have a nice milk-fed possum for his supper. After a while, when he had cut and cut till he was so tired he could hardly cut any more, the tree fell down, and he grabbed his gun and ran to the hole where Billie's house was, and thought sure Billie would jump out and start to run away, and then he could shoot him. But there didn't any possum jump out, and when he looked in Billie's house there wasn't any possum in it. Yes, Mr. Man was disappointed and mad, but there wasn't anything he could do about it, so he went back and picked up the bucket that Billie had dropped, and milked Mrs. Moo Cow in it. Jay Bird wasn't over there that morning, so nobody ever knew what sort of excuse he gave his wife for not bringing home a possum.

Now Good Time for Review

These Days Peculiarly Suitable for New Study of Matthew's Chronicles of Christ and for Reestimating Kingdom.

By William T. Ellis.

As a traveler amidst the mountains pauses to look back upon the scenery he has traversed, so the course of the International Sunday School lesson is interrupted every three months by a review; that a sweeping glance may be had of the ground already covered. A stupendous panorama stretches out in these first 15 chapters of the Book of Matthew, ranging from the birth of the Infant Jesus to the dazzling peaks of the Kingdom of God on earth.

These are good days in which to read Matthew's book. Much that is inarticulate or vague in the social aspirations of these seething times becomes explicit in his presentation of Kingdom truths. There can be small doubt that the world is just now emerging into a new era of Kingdom consciousness. The ferment that is to be found in humanity all over the earth is nothing less than a working toward new and nobler goals for the common life. Not always does this restless public know what it wants; but it is, nevertheless, headed straight toward Kingdom ideals.

More Thinking Needed.

Certainly the hour has struck for all thoughtful persons to give careful consideration to the deeper meaning of the vast movements in our time. They take many forms, but they are all one in a questing after a better social order—a more equitable distribution of the rewards of life; a greater respect for human personality; a larger degree of safety and comfort for all the people; a recognition of the right of everybody to leisure for the development of his spiritual and esthetic nature. So mightily has the tide set in toward these golden isles that nothing, seemingly, can withstand it. The power of the masses is matched by their purpose.

Now our deepest concern is to make sure that the changed order of life which seems inevitable shall be a Christian order, dominated by good will and brotherliness. The standards we are setting up should be the Kingdom standards.

What Kingdom-Rule Means.

That noble pioneer in the interpretation of the social aspects of Christianity, Dr. Walter Rauschenbusch, of Rochester, has left a brief summary of his own ideals and convictions, which may be called the creed of a citizen of the Kingdom of Heaven. He wrote:

"I affirm my faith in the reality of the spiritual world, in the sacred voice of duty, in the compelling power of truth and holiness, in prayer, in the life eternal, in Him who is the life of my life and the reality behind all things visible. I rejoice to believe in God.

"I affirm my faith in the Kingdom of God and my hope in its final triumph. I determine by faith to live day by day within the higher order and the divine peace of my true fatherland, and to carry its spirit and laws into all my dealings in the world that now is.

"I make an act of love toward all fellow men. I accept them as they are, with all their sins and failures, and declare my solidarity with them. If any have wronged or grieved me, I place my mind within the all-comprehending and all-loving mind of God, and here and now forgive. I desire to minister God's love to men and to offer no hindrance to the free flow of His love through me.

"I affirm my faith in life. I call life good and not evil. I accept the limitations of my own life and believe it is possible for me to live a beautiful and Christian life within the conditions set for me. Through the power of Christ which descends on me, I know that I can be more than conqueror. Amen."

The King Who Was King.

It perhaps will serve to clarify our thought if we term this first half of Matthew's Gospel "The character of the King and the laws of the Kingdom." For be it remembered that it is the King that makes the Kingdom, and here we find portrayed the utter simplicity of the birth of Jesus; although attended by wonders and by the gifts of royal Wise Men. As close to common humanity as it was possible for God to crowd Himself came His Son, sharer of man's ordinary lot. In a workingman's home, in a small town, Himself trained to a trade, and used to all the commonplace privations and burdens of lowly life, the Master grew to manhood.

He chose for His companions a little group of common men and set about training them to carry on His Kingdom work. Mostly they were engaged in tasks of helpfulness, large and small—the easing of a social dilemma, the healing of the sick, the raising of the dead, the feeding of the hungry and the inspiring of the discouraged hearts of earth-bound men and women. The Master's talks were mostly in story or picture form: "For without a parable spake He not unto them."

Talk for Common People.

We can not pass by this simplicity and clarity of the Master's presentation of the loftiest truths. The sublimest words ever spoken about God were told to hillside audiences of illiterate peasants. That lesson the great teachers of our own day have forgotten. Modern discussion of religion and sociology and economics is obscured by professional and unintelligible shop talk. Many preachers still use "the language of Canaan," which ordinary listeners do not profess to understand. Religious education has in our day developed a special terminology which is Greek to the plain Sunday school teacher.

All of this high-falutin lingo of the highbrows just doesn't make sense, and it is a clear-cut departure from the example of Jesus, who talked so that "the common people heard him gladly." It is high time that all who call themselves teachers go to school to Him.

For the task of our times is to make clear and real and living the immeasurable truth that, as God's glory is the highest goal of man, so man's good is the supreme purpose of God; and that whatever changes take place in our times should definitely be directed toward the realization of the Kingdom of God on earth.

Institution Makes Appeal for Funds

Farm for Neglected Boys Holds Drive.

The Berkshire Industrial Farm, a home school for neglected and imperiled boys, this week is making its eleventh annual appeal for funds. The appeal is issued by Mrs. William Phillips, wife of the Undersecretary of State, who is local treasurer for the charity. The Berkshire Industrial Farm was established in 1886 to take care of boys from broken homes and those who through neglect were in danger of juvenile delinquency. Boys at the school are given training in such trades as auto mechanics, printing, building and scientific farming. The farm, a complete community, covers 1,100 acres near Canaan, N. Y. It has 150 boy residents.

The Berkshire Farm is supported by voluntary contributions. Checks should be made payable to the Berkshire Industrial Farm and sent to Mrs. William Phillips, 2929 Massachusetts avenue, who will forward them to the farm.

Sales People Revivify Store By Psychology

Phenomenal Business Pick-Up Result of Shop's New Personality.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

There was a shop, a very good shop, filled with a lot of very good things. But business was bad, sales were slow, and the gloom of depression hung thereabout. The salespeople got together in a huddle. The outcome was some bright and shining ideas.

Now, there is a shop — with a brand-new personality. The old straight, up-and-down counters have been eliminated, and new, shorter ones, placed at criss-cross angles with the door, have taken their place. Cans of paints and varnishes on the shelves are arranged in neat rows, their colored labels forming a unique color scheme. Odd household items that have slept for years in dusty drawers have been brought out in the open and arranged on the tops of counters.

The result has been a phenomenal business pick-up. Customers are lured in by the attractive appearance. They can not fail to see the dozen and one things they've "really needed, but never bought."

For Red-Heads and Gray.

Proud Titians (usually known as red-heads) have a new reason for justifiable pride. One of the oldest cosmetic companies in the country has recently put out a russet lipstick and cream rouge especially for these hard-to-suit ladies.

More of a Popular Line.

A supply of Russian woodenware arrived in the stationery department of a local store about four weeks ago. The day it came, it sold out. Next week, another supply and that too went before the store closed. It was the same with some last Saturday. Now, however, the buyer for the department says she's really stocked up on it, so those who got left behind can pay a profitable return visit.

The bowls, platters, ash trays, cigarette boxes and candlesticks are made of lightweight wood.

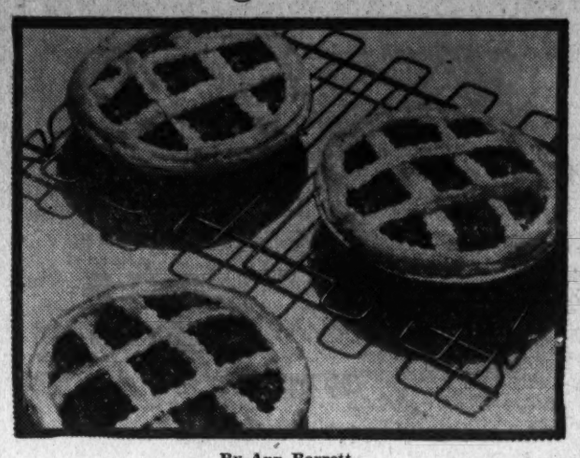
Canned Fruits Cooperate In Making Luscious Pies



By Ann Barrett.

FROM the inside of a can to the inside of a pie is one of the best changes fruit can make. Especially sour red cherries and crushed pineapple. Authoress Eleanor Mercein Kelly will testify to that. And so will thousands more.

But keep in mind two points when you turn this trick. First, the sweetening. Since some canned fruits are sweeter than others, you'll have to taste, before you put the pie together, in order to get the sweetening just as you like it. Second, the amount of thickening to use is a point that two people seldom agree on, so you'll have to adjust this to your own taste, too. But here's a special tip: Acid and sugar tend to break down cornstarch, and make fillings thin out after they have stood. You can offset this partly by not adding the sugar till cornstarch has been cooked with fruit juice.

Lattice Cherry Pie.

As in this recipe for lattice cherry pie. (Make this in 9-inch tin. Or in four individual pies as pictured, each 3½ to 4 inches wide and about 1½ inches deep.) You'll need one No. 2½ size can of sour red cherries, pitted. Drain off the juice and add enough orange juice to fill 2 cups. Heat this juice, then slowly stir into it 2 tablespoons cornstarch (first mixed with ¼ cup water). Stir fast and constantly till smooth. Then cover and cook over hot water about ten minutes.

Next add the cherries, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, a few grains of salt, a few drops of bitter almond extract, ½ cup (or more) of sugar and let cool. Then line 9-inch pie plate with pastry, brush this with unbeaten white of egg, turn in fruit and top with half-inch strips of pastry about 1 inch apart. Brush with egg (if you like top shiny) and bake 10 minutes at about 425 F. Then reduce heat to 350 F. and bake about ten minutes more.

Pineapple Pie.

For regular pineapple two-crust pie, you'll need one No. 3 can of crushed pineapple. Heat this and slowly stir into it 3½ tablespoons cornstarch (first mixed smooth with ½ cup of the cold pineapple juice). Stir constantly till thickened, then cover and cook over hot water about 15 minutes. Next add a few grains of salt, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, ½ tablespoon grated lemon rind, 2 tablespoons butter, ¼ to 1 cup sugar and let cool. Then line 9-inch pie plate with pastry, brush with unbeaten white of egg and turn in fruit. Cover with top crust, pressing this down around the edge with floured fork and perforating center so as to let steam escape. Bake at about 425 F. for ten minutes. Then reduce heat to 350 F. and bake ten minutes more.

Maryland Ham Is This Week's Prize Winner

After so long a period of fasting much time and attention is devoted to planning and preparing menus for the Easter breakfast, luncheon and dinner.

Miss Ruth Clark, of La Plata, Md., has already given thought to her Easter dinner. In submitting the southern Maryland stuffed ham recipe, which won the $5 weekly prize, she informed the food editor that it was the most popular Easter dish in that section.

The recipe follows:

Southern Maryland Stuffed Ham.

Take one medium-size ham, wash it well and cut gashes about an inch long all over the top. Next prepare the following mixture:

One peck of sprouts finely chopped; 6 medium-size onions chopped. Season with salt, pepper and one teaspoon mustard.

Mix all of these ingredients well in a large pan. Then fill in the gashes with the mixture. Put the ham in a cloth bag. Then put it in a boiler and cover with cold water. When the water begins to boil let it boil hard for five hours.

When the ham is thoroughly cold remove it from the bag and take the skin off and sprinkle with black pepper.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

A Factory-Made Spring Tonic.

The vitamins appear to be getting on a standardized mass production basis, in full accord with the principles of the machine age. At first vitamin D was obtained practically only from cod liver. Then laboratory tests of various kinds were devised. Next scientists worked out a method of making vitamin D in the factory. The product is called viosterol.

A long time ago a practical rule of thumb remedy for and preventive of scurvy was discovered. So universal is the knowledge that fresh foods and especially fruits will cure and prevent the disease and such general use was made of the information that old-fashioned scurvy is almost never encountered in modern times. When fresh fruits and vegetables have not been available alert minded men have saved the situation by brewing teas from pine needles and reindeer moss or by a diet of raw penguin meat or similar adaptations.

Then it was found that scurvy is a vitamin C deficiency disease. Next followed the discovery of various laboratory tests for this vitamin. It is now possible to make tests of foods for this vitamin in laboratories without making use of animals. After that it was discovered that vitamin C was the same as ascorbutic acid, a chemical substance the peculiarities of which are pretty well known.

The next step will be to discover a means of making ascorbutic acid in a factory. When synthetic ascorbutic acid goes on the market no one need fear for the fruit groves and the tomato fields.

What Today Means

"Aries."

If March 24 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 5:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 10:30 to 11:30 p. m.

If you were born on March 24, it might be best to restrain from overindulging in your greatest temptation, to "tease" those whose "goat" you think you can get. Excessive teasing is very wearying and trying on the nerves of the unfortunate victim. Another thing it may be well for people born on this date to remember is men, and women, are often judged by their taste in clothing, and clothing which is not of an extreme pattern or fashion is always indicative of better discernment than that which tends to be ostentatious.

The child born on March 24, when old enough to understand, must be taught the wrong of distorting facts and evading issues. This child has many sterling qualities, but also a vivid imagination which must be kept under control. A child possessing strong reasoning powers, unless shown to use them properly, has the temptation to use them for fictional flights and excuses. Properly supervised, children born on March 24 usually grow up to become eminently successful in the lines of endeavor they undertake. They are of very affectionate dispositions, but inclined to be headstrong.

The woman born on March 24 has a great strength of character, and is capable of meeting any trying situation with a calmness that does much to solve or settle the matter quickly. It may be advisable not to always be too determined to have your own way. You may find it pays to give in once in a while. Remember, if you find yourself in the wrong it is not a sign of weakness to admit you are. In reality it requires courage, so always be courageous. Do not turn your nose up at love, for it is a precious commodity.

The man born on March 24 will do well never to indulge in bombastic phrases or lavish display of his possessions. A placid disposition can accomplish more than a turbulent one and is helpful to your physical being. If you cultivate a fondness for reading, you will banish any chance of being lonely.

European Method of Training Statesmen Held Good for U. S.

Mrs. Ramsey, Who Will Lead the Introductory Discussion At the Women Voters' Forum, Believes Now Is Time to Give Youth Political Education.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

PROFESSIONAL education for public service is one of the Nation's outstanding needs, in the belief of Mrs. W. W. Ramsey, of Chicago, who will lead the introductory discussion at the Citizenship School held today at the Washington Hotel under the auspices of the District League of Women Voters.

"Since it takes capable, intelligent people to carry on Government work," said Mrs. Ramsey, "our country would do well to pattern after European nations in promulgating specialized training for statesmanship."

Mrs. Ramsey further pointed out that women have an opportunity now, as never before, to train young people for public office, since so many of this group coming out of college find the doors of industry closed. Searching about for a career, many youths will become interested in politics, she believes, and they deserve to be informed about how to carry on governmental affairs intelligently.

In order to help them—as well as older people who have never taken an active part in politics—the League of Women Voters came into being in 1920. Formerly a vice president of this organization, Mrs. Ramsey has spent much time in studying governmental needs and responsibilities of the citizen.

Her work has been largely in connection with the promotion of voter's schools, and her contribution toward the development of this educational function has been so notable that her services are sought throughout the United States.

"Since citizens in a democracy have greater power over their Government than those under any other form of rule," asserted Mrs. Ramsey, "I am going to try to impress the women who attend the school that those momentous words, 'We the People,' gave to each citizen a great privilege but also laid on him an inescapable responsibility."

Women Interested in Politics.

Mrs. Ramsey is confident that any woman who realizes that she has certain governmental obligations to fulfill will be interested in political education.

She further believes more women are interested in the structure of the Government than ever before. "A great many women who heretofore devoted a major part of their time to social events have become interested in politics," she said, "and I think this is largely due to the activity of the National League of Women Voters, which now has branches in 45 States, the District of Columbia, Hawaii and in nearly a thousand local communities."

Since work of this organization has been carried on through several departments, many women have discovered that the aim of the league is vitally concerned with the life of every citizen.

"We approach women who otherwise might not be interested through a number of different channels. For instance, we try to show them the relationship between Government and adequate child protection, particularly as it is concerned with high standards in public education."

The league also promotes economic welfare through Governmental action, sets forth problems of industrial women workers, and seeks to remove specific discrimination against women.

League Is Nonpartisan.

Mrs. Ramsey further emphasized the fact that organization is open to women of all parties, and stated that the league is, in no respect, a separate political organization. Its interest in candidates is limited to the individual's qualifications for the office sought and the stand taken upon measures which the league supports.

Originally connected with the National League of Women Voters as a member of the Allegheny County League of Pennsylvania, Mrs. Ramsey moved to Chicago in 1920. There she served as vice president of the Chicago league, and later as chairman of the League of Women Voters' division of the Illinois State league.

Chatter Topics Of Girls Have Been Changed

A Cuban Marquesa Says Once It Was Love, Now Politics.

Women talked chiefly of love and dresses when La Marquesa de Santa Ana Santa Maria went to Cuba as a bride 20 years ago.

But today all that is changed. Women talk—as always—but of politics, sociology and economics.

"For," explained La Marquesa yesterday at the Mayflower, "there isn't a woman in Cuba, from the largest property owner to the poorest working woman, who hasn't been affected by the revolution and economic crisis."

La Marquesa, who is a noted pianist and composer, is in Washington for a short visit. Although a native of Spain and a resident of Cuba, she said she always feels as if she is coming home when she comes to the United States.

"I suppose that is because so often I heard members of my family talk about this country when I was a girl," she said. "Of course many things are different here. Certainly there is a greater feeling of security than in Cuba.

"The situation in Cuba is something like that of a country hit by a great earthquake. The greatest terror and fright are over, but there are still minor vibrations. The new government is faced with a tremendous responsibility. It has to provide some 'modus vivendi' for the people, for the present, and to work out the political and economic situation at the same time."

The situation is complicated, according to La Marquesa, by the inertia of the masses.

"Things have been so hard for them for such a long time that they have become discouraged and indifferent," she said. "They cannot get any decent profits for the things they cultivate, nor a living wage for their labor. So they just do enough work to exist. The standard of living is unbelievably low. Of course the climate aids the poor. They require very little to live on. I think if we had more cold weather, they would be more energetic and willing to work out a solution even if it meant greater hardship for a short while. As it is, the outlook is very discouraging."

Feminists are rare in Cuba, La Marquesa said.

"We have no women's clubs, such as you have in this country. Men have clubs where they drink and play cards, and do all the things men do in club rooms, but women are not permitted to join these organizations. But the country clubs and metropolitan clubs are family affairs, and women go with their husbands and fathers. They don't enjoy getting together and talking over bridge tables as they do in this country, but when they do collect, they are certain to talk politics."

Music Academy Fails to Quake At Red Anthem

Philadelphia, March 23 (U.P.).—Independence Hall stood unmoved today and no dire consequences at all had echoed from the singing in sedate old Academy of Music last night of Soviet Russia's "Internationale."

The Youth Concert of the Philadelphia Orchestra sang the Mkommules "Song of the Toiling Masses" on schedule over the vigorous protests of the city's super-patriots.

Perhaps fearful effects predicted by patriots failed to materialize because Director Leopold Stokowski conceded a point and had the song printed in French on the programs. It was originally written in French.

From the "Internationale" the orchestra immediately swung into "The Star-Spangled Banner." The youthful audience sang it, too, and cheered.

On the Ohio River (right), just across from Cincinnati, lies Covington, Ky., the girlhood home of Miss Mary Nixon. She is the first woman to have charge of mail that comes to the Secretary of War's office and to the War Department, located in the State, War and Navy Building (below).

Ideal Charmers Of 1935 Won't Look Artificial

Imitations Garbos Are Out, Beauticians Decide at Conference.

New York, March 23 (Spl.).—The day of platinum blonds and imitation Garbos and Hepburns has definitely passed. According to 24,000 of the world's greatest beauticians, the "Dream Girl" of 1935 must be natural above all things.

"She will stay away entirely from the petite or any unnatural posing," according to the description, "and her hair dress will be the one best suited to her personality."

Last year the dream girl weighed 115 pounds, had a 33-inch bust, 35-inch hips and a 26-inch waist

"In comparing figures to dimensions," said Joseph Byrne, managing director of the International Beauty Culturists Association, "the additional height of the 1935 girl is best indicated by the movement trend. Athletics are her big interests. She isn't any clinging vine.

Another phase of the dream girl situation was discussed by Dr. Louis E. Bisch, M. D., Ph. D., in a lecture at the convention.

"The numerical increase of women in the business world is correlated with the increased sale of cosmetics," Dr. Bisch asserted.

"The right kind of rouge, powder and lipstick has landed many a girl a job, irrespective of her ability," he said.

Women Won't Work for Him If District Attorney Knows It

Says if There Are Capable Women Lawyers He Hasn't Met Them; Maintains They Carry on Too Many Extra-Curriculum Activities.

ASPIRING WOMEN LAWYERS who want to be assistant district attorneys are doomed to defeat. That is, unless District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett has a sudden change of heart.

For Mr. Garnett, who has decreed that he will have no women assistants in his office, yesterday stated that he did not intend to reverse his decision.

"As wives, sweethearts and secretaries, women are fine," said the district attorney, genially but firmly. "But there is no place for them in this office."

But the women are still hopeful, and Mrs. Elizabeth Harris, member of the committee appointed by the Women's Bar Association to win Mr. Garnett over, yesterday said confidently:

"We hope to have a favorable report by the first of the week."

Denying the report that he had said women made him "nervous," Mr. Garnett said smilingly, "On the contrary, I am too old to be made nervous by women. And you can interpret that any way you like."

Mr. Garnett then explained that all the work peculiarly suited to women has been transferred to other courts.

"We no longer handle the Juvenile Court cases or the domestic relations cases," he said. "Our work is prosecuting criminals. And women are not suited for that work. In the first place, women have not had much experience as criminal lawyers. I do not know any woman in the District who has devoted herself to criminal law."

Asked if he did not think that many women were capable lawyers and prosecutors, Mr. Garnett replied, "I suppose many of them are, but I have never met them."

"Please understand," he added, "that I have no quarrel with the ladies. I admire them immensely, I am glad for them to succeed in their chosen profession. But I do not choose to have them working for me.

"The two esteemed women who were acting as assistant attorneys when I came into office were occupying their time hunting up fleeing husbands for distracted wives, and worrying about canned goods.

"Now, I am not sure that fleeing husbands ought to be pursued. And I am certain that a sergeant can do it quite as well as a lawyer. Our schedule does not allow for these activities."

Women are apt to be more temperamental, emotional and narrow in their views than men, Mr. Garnett believes.

"It is very difficult for women to take a cold dispassionate view of things," he said, "and that is absolutely necessary for a prosecuting attorney.

"And if all these reasons aren't enough, I have the best of all saved up. We have no vacancies and no appropriations for more salaries. Certainly I am not going to put out some of the people I have working here just to give a woman a job."

Having made this very final statement, Mr. Garnett turned back to his desk. A moment later he flashed his woman interviewer an appealing smile.

"Believe me," he said, "I have no malice in my heart toward women."

American Women Too Careless About Looks, Says Hair Stylist

American women are not beauty-parlor addicts. They spend much less time with the hair dresser than do the women of Europe. This is the observation brought back from a four months' study trip in Europe by Nicholas Philco, Washington hair stylist.

Study of beauty clinics and shops in seven European countries has convinced the local specialist that American women are too indifferent about their looks.

"They don't take their looks seriously enough," he declared. "The hectic pursuit of other careers interferes. Outside the acting profession, very few American women devote enough time to studying themselves. Many never discover their most flattering possibilities. With European women, beauty is a career in itself."

Styles of hair dress do not differ greatly in the various countries, according to Mr. Philco. He found that German, Austrian and Belgian women go in for the longer bobs now popular in America. The shortest and frilliest bobbed coiffeurs are found in Paris.

He discovered the most beautiful heads of hair in Italy and Spain. This he attributed to the almost lavish use of olive oil in those countries.

"Italians begin using olive oil on the skin and scalp of their infants. The practice is continued through life. Even some of the aged women of Spain and Italy retain their luxuriant hair. Very few bobbed coiffures are seen there."

American women, asserted Stylist Philco, want beauty dished up to them in a hurry. In that musical mouthful from "Mademoiselle Modiste," they "want what they want when they want it." Convincing beauty, he said, can not be attained that way.

"It takes serious individual analysis, plenty of expert advice, and faithful attention to detail to achieve brilliant results.

"Worry, hurry and nervous strain, undergone by feminie careerists are sure beauty destroyers. The art of relaxation is beauty's greatest friend. European women have mastered this art to a greater degree than have American women. That is one reason for their willingness to spend longer hours in the beauty salons."

Beautiful hands were another subject of Mr. Philco's study. Well-groomed hands automatically behave more charmingly than do those given less helpful consideration, he declared. American women are paying more attention to preserving their hands than formerly. Justly proud of handsome manicures, they are mastering the art of using their hands artistically.

Cabinet Kewpie.

IF EVER ANYBODY looked like a grown-up version of one of Rose O'Neill's famous Kewpies, Mrs. Homer S. Cummings does. The refreshingly plump wife of the Attorney General has that happy, untroubled look that only folks whom the Lord seems to have intended to be undieted possess.

* * * *

Mrs. Cummings is one of the most popular of all the Cabinet ladies and has one of the most beautiful apple-blossom complexions ever seen in Washington. She also is one of the smartest gowned of many smartly gowned women seen in the Capital during the "season."

* * * *

It was something of a shock to learn that her Christian name is Cecilia. It seemed a little difficult to reconcile the cloying sweetness and angelic fragility of the name of the sainted patroness of music with the gay cheerfulness and clever, unaffected reality of Mrs. Cummings.

* * * *

A surge of relief and increased belief in the fit adjustment of elementary errors in this life possessed the hearer when Mrs. Cummings added, with the frank little laugh that suits her well—

"My friends all call me Pinkie."

Choose Partners.

IN A LOVELY home in Rock Creek Park, within calling distance of the chamois and yaks at the Zoo, the Gerrit S. Millers (junior) have been giving some unusual dances this year.

They are enthusiastically reviving the old square dances, using Henry Ford's book which tells how to quadrille, schottische and skip through the mazurka.

* * * *

Ten to twelve couples meet at the Millers' once a month and engage lustily in this square dancing to phonograph records which not only provide the authentic music but also "call off" changes in steps in true, old-fashioned manner.

* * * *

At first the instructions seemed quite bewildering and complicated. Now, as the last snows melt and the crocuses pop up, the sureness which familiarity brings has clarified the business of "bowing to partners," "bowing to corners," "promenade," "ladies' chain," "grand right and left" and all the rest of it.

One of the favorites is "Money Musk"—a little like a Paul Jones in the line-up but with intricacies all its own.

First Woman to Hold Position; Received Appointment in 1918

Thirty-Five Years Ago She Came From Her Home in Kentucky to Start as Typist; Today She's Division Chief.

Women have worked for the United States Government for years—almost since its founding. But among the ranks of the Government workers there is a small group of trail-blazers—women who have pioneered their way to jobs that have always, in the past, been held by men. One of these pioneers in Government work is intrusted with all mail addressed to the War Department and to the Secretary of War.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

SEVENTY-FIVE letters a day, on an everage, are placed before the Secretary of War for his signature. Before each one reaches his office it has been thoroughly examined by a gray-haired woman from Kentucky, Miss Mary S. Nixon.

Miss Nixon, as chief of the Coordination and Record Division, office of the Secretary of War, receives all mail addressed to the War Department as well as to the Secretary himself. The only woman ever to hold this position, Miss Nixon received her appointment in 1918 when Newton D. Baker was Secretary of War.

The Kentuckian could not have found a more trying time to enter upon her new duties. She had been a stenographer in the War Department. Suddenly she found herself in a maelstrom of frantic war-time mail and dispatches; mail and dispatches that had to reach the right person in the least possible time or had to be painstakingly sorted and accurately filed. Miss Nixon, within a few days, had her office and staff in smooth running order. She says now that the confusion and rush of war-time was excellent preparation for the recent increase in mail, brought about by the NRA, the CCC and the PWA.

"The quantity of mail that pours in here every day is the one difficult part of my job," said Miss Nixon yesterday at her office in the State, War and Navy Building. "The work is organized so we know what to do with every letter, but there are so many, many of them," she explained. Signed portraits of Newton D. Baker, John W. Weeks, Dwight F. Davis, and Patrick J. Hurley looked down upon her. A picture of George H. Dern, present Secretary of War, was missing.

"I hope to have one of him someday," said Miss Nixon as she admired the rows of portraits behind her desk. Assistant Secretaries of War were also represented in the little collection.

A clerk handed some correspondence to Miss Nixon. The division chief leafed through it and then gave the clerk orders for having it delivered to a certain official. Eight women clerks are under the division chief's direction. In addition to the clerks, two men are employed as messengers.

Mary S. Nixon, after finishing high school in Covington, Ky., decided to go into Government work because an older sister was employed in Washington with the Pension Bureau. That was 35 years ago—soon after the close of the Spanish-American War—when few occupations were open to young women.

She Leaves Kentucky.

"There was teaching school, of course. But I never had any desire to teach," declared Miss Nixon as she recalled her girlhood in Kentucky. "Mother, two of my sisters, and myself were living quietly in Covington when I decided that I wanted to work. Mother suggested that we come to Washington, since my oldest sister was working for the Government. She wanted her little family to be together. And the Nation's Capital seemed a thrilling prospect to us."

Soon after her arrival in Washington, Mary Nixon took the civil service examination and passed with No. 1 rating for her State. But in spite of her high grade she had a difficult time obtaining a place in the Government service. The Kentucky quota was full.

Miss Nixon managed to get a temporary place as stenographer in the office of the Secretary of War. When the temporary job was at an end, she went back to Kentucky and worked for six months in the State pension office.

That six months period in Kentucky made her eligible for Government service in Washington. She returned to the office of the Secretary of War's chief clerk and remained there until she was appointed chief of the Coordination and Record Division.

Takes Night Classes.

Miss Nixon's one regret is that she did not attend college before she entered Government work. After she had been chief of division about four years she spent a summer at Cornell University, studying French, English and nature study. Then for two years she went to night classes at George Washington University, at that time Columbia University, where she continued her study of French and English.

"Now I don't have time for those things," she sighed. "The NRA and CCC gave work to persons all over the country. Well, they gave me more work, too." She chuckled. "It keeps us going early and late to take care of the big increase in mail."

Just then the door opened. A man, bearing stacks of letters and dispatches, walked in and dumped them on Miss Nixon's desk.

Workaday Role Is Abandoned By Navy Blue

Smart Shade Rejuvenated This Spring; Goes Very Giddy.

Navy blue, once the symbol of feminine respectability, has gone giddy.

Many women, on learning that navy was slated for a return to fashion this spring shuddered. Before them arose visions of firm-chinned business women in flat-heeled shoes, whose only idea of a proper office outfit was a good old reliable navy blue serge. They also had memories of the shopping tours of their youth which always culminated in the purchase of a navy blue suit because it was "inconspicuous and genteel."

But those who feared the worst have been relieved to see navy blue return rejuvenated and modern—made zestful by accompainments of plaid scarfs, striped trimmings and printed blouses. The navy suit certainly isn't what is used to be nor for that matter, the navy dress. Both abound in verve so far as cut is concerned and they are positively saucy in the way they flaunt their trimmings.

Moreover, navy isn't back in any workaday role. It will be seen plenty of places outside offices—at cocktail gatherings, dinner parties, evening affairs, on the golf links and the beaches.

There are navy taffeta dresses that make almost any woman resemble a subdeb; there are navy sheers and organdies for summer; navy crepes and thin woolens for afternoons; navy linens for sports, and even navy shorts for beach strolls.

Navy even appears in furs, navy blue dyed fox being made into capes and small collars. Navy dyed fox also is combined with white for evening wraps.

There are navy sweaters and navy bathing suits, navy hats and navy shoes, navy linen pocketbooks and navy kid gloves. No article of attire is immune from the navy influence.

Navy Is No Longer Merely "Genteel"

Navy blue is modern and dashing in this frock of fancy wool with capelet and peplum. Navy silk crepe plaided in red and white is used for the main part of the bodice and the capelet lining, the whole producing a patriotic color effect.

A Penny for My Thoughts?

By Katherine Smith.

A penny for my thoughts? You ask
A foolish thing, as if I would Be willingly a debtor. Wait,
Be sure your bargain will be good.

But times have changed, and I am filled
With mental generosity.
A penny for my thoughts? My dear,
I'll give them all to you—and free!

"The Love Birds" Alight Upon the Rialto Screen and a Gentleman Pays a Call

Screen Comedy Fails to Make Most of Stars

Summerville and Pitts Are Costarred; Pete, the Dog Actor, Drops By.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

"THE LOVE BIRDS." Universal picturization of a story by Clarence Marks and Dale Van Every, adapted to the screen by Doris Anderson, starring "Slim" Summerville and ZaSu Pitts, with Mickey Rooney, Maude Eburne, Gertrude Short, Dorothy Christy, Clarence H. Wilson and John T. Murray. Directed by William A. Seiter. Reviewed Thursday evening.

By Nelson B. Bell.

One doubts that this loosely jointed tale of two gullible young people—one a chicken fancier, the other a school teacher, in a manner of speaking—will add even a cubit to the stature of either of the popular funsters engaged in its principal assignments.

"Slim" Summerville and ZaSu Pitts, both, it seems to me, have been infinitely funnier in other of their joint enterprises. They are personally less culpable for their seeming present lapse from the superlatives of comic endeavor than the authors of their vehicle. "The Love Birds," as a piece of cohesive and substantial dramaturgy, is not so hot.

"The Gold Rush."

It concerns two widely separated social types who happen, by a feat of high-pressure salesmanship, to purchase the same sequestered estate in the "peace and quiet" of a California countryside. Many peculiar, and some decidedly funny, things happen to them when they attempt to take simultaneous possession of their unwittingly common property. Still further amusing complications pile up when a lost gold inlay from one of Mr. Summerville's less tractable molars gives rise to the belief that the "Mirage" property is thickly studded with nuggets of gold that will bring fabulous fortunes to those holding the land.

This is where the high-pressure salesmen—and one was a personable blonde—reappear on the scene and pay back $20,000 for a $3,000 purchase in the belief that they are getting something for nothing—or are about to. One suspects that with the $20,000 Miss Pitts and Mr. Summerville were able to set up quite a poultry ranch.

A Comic Drinking Bout.

During the course of the goings-on, a theatrical family bursts in upon the unsuspecting proprietors of all this bogus wealth and sets in motion a dance-hall drinking scene that permits the costars of the picture to indulge a few hitherto untried comedy devices—that is to say, untried for them.

There is another comic episode in which Mr. John T. Murray—not so many years ago one of the Shuberts' mainstays in the matters of musical comedy and revue—extracts the wrong one of Mr. Summerville's teeth, but somehow, this, too, seemed to lack some of the essence of sheer humorous inspiration.

Mr. Summerville is about as usual in his comedy methods and Miss Pitts is no less fluttery than ordinarily in the unique uses of her hands and the querulous inflections of her voice. Master Mickey Mooney, injected into the goings-on for no especial reason, gives an excellent account of himself as a youngster supposed to be a "big sissy," but who is, as as matter of fact, so pugilistically inclined that as the picture ends he is knocking his pleasant little playmates for loops and barrel-rolls in every possible direction.

Support and Supplementaries.

Of the other supporting members of the cast there is little to be said. Nobody has anything very much to do and does it with adequacy, but scarcely more than that. Maude Eburne, Gertrude Short, Dorothy Christy and the divers and sundry others listed among the dramatis personae handle expertly the few meager tasks that are allotted them.

The supplementary bill includes an interesting issue of the Universal News, with Graham McNamee surrendering a little of his usual preeminence to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, in their testimony before the Senate committee investigating the air-mail contract cancellations; another "Vaudeville Parade," although that, I believe, is not precisely what it is entitled, featuring Peter Higgins, tenor, and a considerable list of other celebrities, and a new release of Universal's "Goofytone News," which seems still to these waning senses to fall a little this side of satire's utter peak.

Although we have not as yet had time to peruse its 1056 pages in anything more than the most cursory manner, we still wish to express a very genuine sense of gratitude to Jack Allcoate, formerly on the staff of this estimable family journal, for a spick-and-span copy of the Film Daily's Year Book of the Motion Picture for 1934, not only hot off the press, but handsomely emblazoned with our name in gold on the front cover. This volume has always been one of the most valuable of the picture editor's reference works and seems, at a hasty glance, to be even more so than ever this year. The current is the sixteenth edition, by the way, and will be more comprehensively reviewed in this space at a later date. Thanks very much, Jack, for the book and the cordial note that accompanied it—preceded it by one mail, as a matter of fact, if you must be literal about it.

A Gentleman Calls.

It is a gay life that is led by the dramatic desks of the daily press. You meet so many interesting people—as the saying goes.

For example, as remarked yesterday, among Wednesday night's casual callers were Ben Atwell, one of the most sagacious of the theater's stentors; Irving Lehrer, of the Phil Spitalny organization, accompanied by Ted Shapiro, Mme. Sophie Tucker's accompanist at the Earle, and one of the contemporary stage's most accomplished pianists; Mr. and Mrs. Sid Gary, from the "Broadway Roundup" stage revue, and numerous others.

But last night at about 9:30 we were paid a call by one of the most gifted gentlemen of the lot—Pete, the ring-eyed bulldog actor of the "Our Gang" comedies, with Lou Brown of the Fox publicity department, and Harry Lucenay, who presents him on the stage, at the end of a couple of stout leather leashes!

A Swell Fellow.

It was my impression that Pete had surrendered his place of eminence with the "Gang" to a junior offspring, but Harry Lucenay tells me that this is the original Pete, now aged 10, and his deportment in my office bears out the belief.

Pete is a swell fellow. Understands the English language, apparently, as well as anyone and displays a remarkable grasp of what to do and when. He is a bigger terrier than the screen represents him to be and the ring around his eye seems to be real, rather than done with an eyebrow pencil. If it is a case of dyeing, it has been so skillfully accomplished that no one, by any possibility, ever could distinguish the fraud. I know, because this is a matter that I gave some attention while wishing that Pete belonged to me instead of to Harry.

In leaving, he barked a pleasant "good-evening" and shook hands with utmost cordiality. A perfect gentleman, Pete, and I am glad to have met him socially.

There seems to be something slightly fraudulent in the stigma that always has attached to the Lenten season in the theater. In the old days it was customary either to close the house entirely or pay the actors half salaries and otherwise admit defeat even before it happened. It is interesting to note, in the face of these past practices—and many of them are still current, as far as that goes—that 30 days of the Lenten period at RKO-Keith's Theater already have been devoted to the presentation of a single picture, "It Happened One Night," with constantly growing, rather than diminishing, attendance. The film still has eight days to go, and they are all Lenten days. It all seems to come down to the fact that the public will support a good picture, regardless of time, place or other presumably vital consideration, provided that picture supplies elements of entertainment of outstanding merit. There seems to be neither Lenten gloom nor superstition on Fifteenth street this year.

A Laboratory of Taste.

It is an odd coincidence that the day comment was made here concerning the somewhat difficult character of Gladys Hasty Carroll's story of "The Earth Turns" as exciting material for the screen, a letter should come on three closely single-spaced pages from Charlie Einfeld, director of publicity for the Warner Brothers and First National, explaining that his companies have established, or are establishing, a Laboratory of Production and Publicity for the purpose of discovering, insofar as is possible, the exact preference of the public concerning pictures as they are now made.

"As the Earth Turns" is made the subject of the letter's clinical discussion of the uses and nonuses of "hokum" as a potent means of arousing audience interest. Mr. Einfeld is at one with this department in the view that "hokum" is merely an accentuation of those qualities of drama which it has been proved the public likes best. There is none, he says, in "As the Earth Turns." There couldn't be any in it, with any reasonable fidelity to the written work.

Mr. Einfeld's letter is too long by far to quote, but it betrays a viewpoint and willingness to investigate mass preferences that is an encouraging sign at a time when the cinema is emerging as real "theater" and an, as yet, unrealized medium of human expression.

Spring Song!

So, I'll be seeing you out front, enjoying Phil Spitalny and his 32 "Musical Queens," which is what, from the photographs, they seem to be—especially Ethel Pastor and the De Marco Trio of vocalists.

Would this be spring?

Mrs. Grant was the former Virginia Cherrill, former leading woman with Charlie Chaplin in "City Lights." Mr. Grant began work opposite Sylvia Sidney in "Thirty Day Princess" the day after their return to Hollywood, just to prove, no doubt, that his independence had not been destroyed by matrimony.

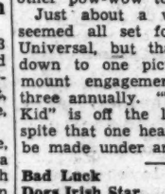
Straight From the Studios

Celebrated Barrie Play for Helen Hayes' New Film; Richard Dix Is Devoted to Tiny Daughter; Noted on Hollywood Boulevard.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, March 22.—So many different pictures have been reported for Helen Hayes that it is with some satisfaction that one records "What Every Woman Knows" as the final choice.



MIRIAM HOPKINS.

It is the production slated whensoever she returns from appearing in "Mary of Scotland," which is approaching the closing stage in New York.

"What Every Woman Knows" is from the Barrie play, and will present the star as the shrewd wife of an ambitious politician, famous for its charm and quaintness. The picture was once made as a silent with Lois Wilson.

Miriam Hopkins Opposite Bing.

Miriam Hopkins will be the chorus girl who hides in the men's dormitory in "She Loves Me Not." The decision was made yesterday definitely. She will therefore play opposite Bing Crosby in this movie version of a terrifically gay stage comedy.

Polly Walters, who is doing the part in the New York production, was regarded as the sure choice, but tests were not entirely satisfactory. So Miss Hopkins will have it.

The others appearing will include Kitty Carlisle, from the "Champagne, Sec." company of the Manhattan stage; Warren Hymer and Gertrude Michael, and more roles yet to be cast. Elliot Nugent will direct.

New Contract for Lee Tracy.

Lee Tracy is all but ready to sign with Paramount. The contract will be executed today. It wasn't signed yesterday, nor Saturday, despite rumors to that effect. A hitch developed over one clause in the contract, and Tracy and the studio are to get together for another pow-wow today.

Just about a week ago Tracy seemed all set for a contract at Universal, but that has dwindled down to one picture. His Paramount engagement will call for three annually. "The Lemon Drop Kid" is off the list officially, despite that one hear rumors it may be made under another title.

Bad Luck Dogs Irish Star.

Erin O'Brien-Moore's bad luck in the movies seems to persist. She is the attractive Irish type who was seen as the daughter in "Street Scene." She was under contract once to M. G. M., and recently Universal engaged her for "The Humbug." While with M. G. M., she did practically nothing, owing to lack of suitable parts, and at the U she has just been taken ill as "The Humbug" has started, and is being replaced by Rene Gadd, vivacious young English actress, who played in "The Uncertain Lady."

Miss O'Brien-Moore impressed very favorably, too, in "Street Scene," and has since done "Riddle Me This" and "Men Must Fight."

Lloyd Production Resumed.

Resumption of "The Cat's Paw," starring Harold Lloyd, is now definitely programmed for next Monday. Reason is that Director Sam Taylor has recovered, and was yesterday at the studio.

The picture has been stopped for about ten days. It may possibly get under way before Monday.

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

Osgood Perkins will arrive here today to play the role of Duc Richelieu in "Du Barry," with Dolores Del Rio. The production is to get under way about the end of the week.

Ted Fio Rito and his band are to do a short film called "What Price Jazz?" Shirley Ross and Joan Gale are in the cast.

Alfred E. Green will direct Kay Francis in "Firebird," and Lloyd Bacon will make "Hey, Sailor," with James Cagney and Pat O'Brien.

By Grace Kingsley.

Hollywood, March 22.—Though Richard Dix is a divorced man, his devotion to his little daughter, Mary Ellen, is remarked by all his friends.

Richard sends for her two or three times a week, and takes her riding in his big automobile, and then to dinner at his house. There they play games, and Richard is teaching her the alphabet. She loves to toddle beside him on the ranch, and there is a pony she is to learn to ride some day.

CONSTANCE BENNETT.

If Richard is devoted to any lady older than Mary Ellen, nobody has found it out to date.

Ida Lupino's Mysterious Ring.

The mystery ring which Ida Lupino has been wearing on her right hand since she arrived in Hollywood was revealed yesterday as her good-luck charm. It is studded with diamonds and sapphires, and was the gift of her father, Stanley Lupino.

"Daddy gave it to me six years ago," Ida disclosed. "And ever since then things have broken splendidly for me. The only time I failed to wear it, I fell off a horse."

Joe E. Brown Entertains.

Summer parties in the garden are with us again. But to be sure everybody was comfortable, Mr. and Mrs. Joe E. Brown had erected a huge marquee, out in the patio of their Beverly home, on the occasion, Sunday, of their farewell party before leaving for a round-the-world jaunt. There the main event, as one might say, took place, since everybody crowded into it.

Dick Powell had flown back from San Diego to escort Mary Brian . . . George O'Brien was a guest, but Marguerite Churchill, his wife, had remained at home to entertain last-minute guests. . . . George said they were getting a house in town in preparation for the blessed event, expected in May. . . . Guests also included Ned Sparks, Mr. and Mrs. John Mack Brown, Dorothy Burgess, Lyle Talbot and Alice Faye, Mr. and Mrs. Regis Toomey, and many others.

Heard On The Boulevard.

Constance Bennett and Gilbert Roland at the Tingel-Tangel Theater, watching "Allez-Oop" . . . Also Raul Roulien and Conchita Montenegro, Sally Blane and Peter Arno, Jack La Rue and Margaret Lucille . . . Ralph Bellamy lunching at the Vendome . . . Telling about the garage he lately built on his Palm Springs lot . . . "When it was finished it was 2 inches out of plumb, and a carpenter had to go all over it," he said . . . Has been reading "By Your Leave," Lillian Gish's latest vehicle, and may star in it . . . Has just bought a Connecticut farm, near those of Robert Montgomery and Katharine Hepburn . . . Frances Dee presenting her husband, Joel McCrea, with a new silver-mounted saddle; he said he was tired of the one he has been using so long . . . Pert Kelton has an electric fan installed in her car.

Emmett Vogan says that one chorus girl asked, "Who was it crossed the Delaware?" and her girl friend replied, "Luther Burbank."

First Extra—Laugh at my voice if you wish, but there'll be a crowd at my concert tonight.

Second Extra—Sure—but three's a crowd!

Waynesboro, Pa., March 23 (Spl.).—A fire caused by a brooder stove destroyed a hennery at the home of Elmer Mitchell here yesterday.

Teachers in Allegany Refuse Salary Refund

Cumberland, Md., March 23 (Spl.).—Richard Rizer, principal of the Cresaptown School, was elected president of the Allegany County Teachers' Association at the annual meeting here yesterday. He succeeds Mrs. Margaret S. Upham. Miss Althea R. Fuller, this city, is vice president; Miss Mildred E. Willison, secretary, and Miss Rose Schmutz, treasurer.

The teachers voted not to take advantage of an act passed by the last Legislature whereby the 10 per cent salary reduction they took voluntarily for a period of two years would be restored.

The President and Mr. Baron are members of the 1904 class. All members and their families have been invited to the reunion.

The Dragon Murder Case —By S. S. Van Dine.

The Story Thus Far.

Philo Vance and District Attorney Markham, with Sergt. Heath, are investigating the strange disappearance of Sanford Montague in the old Dragon Pool on the Stamm estate. According to Leland, one of Stamm's guests, each member of the house party had sufficient motive for murdering Montague with the exception of Bernice Stamm, to whom he was engaged. Stamm himself was helplessly intoxicated at the time of the tragedy and is under a doctor's care. As Vance questions him a woman's sudden and terrifying scream rings out from the floor above. It is Stamm's mother, who is convinced that the pool is inhabited by a dragon that protects her family against its enemies, of whom she claims Montague was one. Vance questions Alex Greeff, another of the guests.

"That seems to be the general impression," Vance returned, "but I was hoping you might be more lucid on that point than the others have been."

"What's there to be lucid about?" Greeff seemed to be avoiding the issue. "I suppose it's reasonable enough when a chap like Montague—who's always been riding for a fall—gets what's coming to him. But, somehow, when it happens so neatly and at the right time, we're apt to think it's peculiar."

"Yes, yes, of course. But it wasn't the logical eventualities I was referring to," Vance's voice held a tinge of annoyance. "I was referring to the fact that the conditions in the house here during the last two days constituted a perfect atmosphere for a type of tragedy quite removed from the merely accidental."

"You're right about the atmosphere." Greeff spoke harshly. "There was murder in the air—if that's what you mean. And if Montague had passed out by any other means except drowning, I'd say his death warranted a pretty thorough investigation. But he wasn't poisoned; he wasn't accidentally shot; he didn't get vertigo and fall out of a window; and he didn't tumble downstairs and break his neck. He simply dived off a springboard, with every one looking on."

"That's what makes it so difficult, don't y' know. * * * I understand that you and Mr. Leland and young Tatum dived in after the johnny."

"It was the least we could do," Greeff came back pugnaciously; "though I'm frank to admit it was more or less a gesture on my part, as I can't swim much, and if I had run into him he'd probably have dragged me down with him. Still, you hate to see any fellow, however rotten, pass out of this world in front of your eyes without making some attempt to save him."

"Quite noble of you, I'm sure," Vance murmured indifferently. "By the by, I understand Montague was engaged to Miss Stamm."

Predicts Broken Engagement.

Greeff nodded and drew on his cigarette.

"I never knew why it was, except that good women always fall for that type of man," he commented, with a philosophic air. "But I think she would have broken the engagement sooner or later."

"Would you mind my asking what your own feelings toward Miss Stamm are?"

Greeff opened his eyes in surprise, then laughed noisily.

"I see what you're getting at. But you can't make me out the villain of the piece. I like Bernice—everybody who knows her likes her. But as for my being sentimental about her: I'm too old and wise for that. My feeling for her has always been a fatherly one. She often comes to me for advice when Stamm's too deep in his cups. And I give her good advice—yes, by gad! I told her only yesterday that she was making a fool of herself to think of marrying Montague."

"How did she take this advice, Mr. Greeff?"

"The way all women take advice; haughtily and contemptuously. No woman ever wants advice. Even when they ask for it, they're merely looking for agreement with what they've already decided to do."

Vance changed the subject.

"Just what do you think happened to Montague tonight?"

Greeff spread his hands vaguely. "Bumped his head on the bottom—or got a cramp. What else could have happened to him?"

"I haven't the vaguest notion." Vance admitted blandly. "But the episode is teeming with possibilities. I was hopin', don't y' know, that you might help to lead us out of our darkness." He spoke lightly, but his eyes were fixed with cold steadiness on the man opposite.

Greeff returned the gaze for several moments in silence, and his ruddy face tightened into a mask.

Advises Him to Forget.

"I understand perfectly," he enunciated at length, in a chill, even tone. "But my advice to you, my friend, is to forget it. Montague had it coming to him, and he got it. It was an accident that fitted in with everybody's wishes. You can play with the idea till doomsday, but you'll end up with the fact I'm telling you now: Montague was accidentally drowned."

Vance smiled cynically.

"My word! Are you intimatin' that Montague's death is that liter'ry pet of the armchair criminologist—the perfect crime?"

Greeff moved forward in his chair and set his jaw.

"I'm not intimating anything, my friend. I'm merely telling you."

"Really, y' know, we're dashed grateful." Vance crushed out his cigarette. "Anyway, I think we'll do a bit of pryin' around. * * *"

At this moment there came an interruption. We heard what sounded like a scuffle on the stairs, and there came to us the angry, shrill tones of Stamm's voice:

"Let go of my arm. I know what I'm doing."

And then Stamm jerked the drawing-room portieres aside and glared at us. Behind him, fuming and remonstrative, stood Dr. Holliday. Stamm was clad in his pajamas, and his hair was disheveled. It was obvious that he had just risen from bed. He fixed his watery eyes on Greeff with angry apprehension.

"What are you telling these policemen?" he demanded, bracing himself against the door jamb.

"My dear Rudolf," Greeff protested ingratiatingly, rising from his chair, "I'm telling them nothing. What is there to tell?"

"I don't trust you," Stamm retorted. "You're trying to make trouble. You're always trying to make trouble here. You've tried to turn Bernice against me, and now, I'll warrant, you're trying to turn these policemen against me." His eyes glared, and he had begun to tremble. "I know what you're after—money! But you're not going to get it. You think that if you talk enough you can blackmail me. * * * His voice sank almost to a whisper, and his words became incoherent.

Dr. Holliday took him gently by the arm and tried to lead him from the room, but Stamm, with an exhausting effort, threw him off and moved unsteadily forward.

Greeff Glances at Accuser.

Greeff had stood calmly during this tirade, looking at his accuser with an expression of commiseration and pity.

"You're making a great mistake, old friend," he said in a quiet voice. "You're not yourself tonight. Tomorrow you'll realize the injustice of your words, just as you'll realize that I would never betray you."

"Oh, you wouldn't eh?" Much of the anger had gone out of Stamm's attitude, but he still seemed to be dominated by the idea of Greeff's persecution. "I suppose you haven't been telling these people"—he jerked his head toward us—"what I said about Montague——"

Greeff raised his hand in protest and was about to reply, but Stamm went on hurriedly:

"Well, suppose I did say it! I had more right to say it than any one else. And as far as that goes, you've said worse things. You hated him more than I did." Stamm cackled unpleasantly. "And I know why. You haven't pulled the wool over my eyes about your feelings for Bernice." He raised his arm and wagged a quivering finger at Greeff. "If anybody murdered Montague, it was you!"

Exhausted by his effort, he sank into a chair and began to shake as if with palsy.

Vance stepped quickly to the stricken man.

"I think a grave mistake has been made here tonight, Mr. Stamm," he said in a kindly but determined voice. "Mr. Greeff has reported nothing to us that you have said. No remark he has made to us could possibly be construed as disloyalty to you. I'm afraid you're a bit overwrought."

Stamm looked up blearily, and Greeff went to his side, placing a hand on his shoulder.

"Come, old friend," he said, "you need rest."

Stamm hesitated. A weary sob shook his body and he permitted Greeff and Dr. Holliday to lift him from the chair and lead him to the door.

"That will be all tonight, Mr. Greeff," Vance said. "But we will have to ask you to remain here till tomorrow."

"Oh, that's all right." And he and the doctor piloted Stamm across the hallway toward the stairs.

Trainor Admits Nurse.

A moment later the front doorbell rang. Trainor admitted the nurse for whom Dr. Holliday had telephoned and led her immediately upstairs.

Vance turned from the door, where he had been standing, and came back into the room, halting before Leland, who had remained passive throughout the strange scene before Stamm and Greeff.

"Have you by any chance," he asked, "any comments to make on the little contretemps we have just witnessed?"

Leland frowned and inspected the bowl of his pipe.

"No-o," he replied, after a pause, "except that it is obvious Stamm is frightfully on edge and in a state of shock after his excessive drinking tonight. * * * And it might be, of course," he supplemented, "that in the back of his mind there has been a suspicion of Greeff in connection with financial matters, which came to the surface in his weakened condition."

"That souhds reasonable," Vance mused. "But why should Stamm mention the word murder?"

"He is probably excited and suspicious because of the presence of you gentlemen here," Leland suggested.

"Not having been a witness to the tragedy, he is ignorant of all the details."

Vance did not reply. Instead he walked to the mantelpiece and inspected a carved gold clock which stood there. He ran his fingers over the incised scroll-work for a moment, and then turned slowly. His face was serious, and his eyes were looking past us.

"I think that will be all for tonight," he said in a flat, far-away tone. "Thank you for your help, Mr. Leland. But we must ask you, too, to remain here till tomorrow. We will be here again in the morning."

Leland bowed and, without a word, went softly from the room.

When he had gone, Markham rose.

"So you're coming here again in the morning?"

"Yes, old dear." Vance's manner had suddenly changed. "And so are you, don't y' know. You owe it to your constituency. It's a most absorbin' case. And I'd wager one of my Cezanne water-colors that when Montague's body is found, the medical examiner's report will be anything but what you expect."

Markham's eyelids fluttered, and he looked searchingly at Vance.

"You think you have learned something that would point to an explanation other than accidental death?"

"Oh, I've learned an amazin' amount," was all that Vance would vouchsafe. And Markham knew him well enough not to push the matter further at that time.

Meager Pay, Long Day of Aid Jobs Hit

House Sub-Committee Hears Delegation of Civic Groups.

New Bridges Favored as Appropriations Are Outlined.

Pleas for school additions, a Georgetown branch library, increased appropriations for the Community Center Department, money for plans for a new Chain Bridge, and protests against long hours and low wages in the District Welfare Department were heard yesterday by the House District Appropriations sub-committee.

The sub-committee today will begin drafting its report, according to Chairman Cannon, and will be ready to submit it to the House whenever the latter is ready to receive it.

More than threescore delegates from organized civic and citizens bodies were heard.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, registered a protest against a 7-day week at the District Jail, a 12-hour day at Gallinger Hospital, and what he termed "sub-subsistence" salaries in the emergency relief division of the Welfare Department.

Favors Regular Pay.

He recommended that employes of the relief division be paid on the same basis as regular Government employes and that increased appropriations be granted for the jail and Gallinger Hospital, so excessive hours may be reduced.

J. R Wyckoff, vice chairman; Dorsey W. Hyde, jr., chairman, and a delegation from the Georgetown Public Library Association urged inclusion of an appropriation of $150,000 for a branch library in Georgetown.

The delegation pointed out that a population of 46,000, including Georgetown University and 40 public and private schools, is two miles from a public library.

Representative Jenckes (Democrat), Indiana, appeared with a delegation from the Children's Hospital to urge the sub-committee to change its policy of appropriating only enough money to last the hospital about six months with the understanding that the remainder would be taken care of in a deficiency appropriation.

The delegation included Mrs. Frederick Brooke, president of the ladies' board of the hospital; Mrs. Mattie Gibson, superintendent, and O. H. P. Johnson, president of the board.

Farmers' Market Urged.

Representative Smith (Democrat), Virginia, accompanied J. W. Schaeffer, president of the Southwest Citizens Association, in asking that the Southwest Farmers' Market be completed. Schaeffer also urged sufficient funds to complete the purchase of a site for the Jefferson Junior High School.

Henry I. Quinn, of the Board of Education, and James G. Yaden, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, urged the subcommittee to increase the estimate for community center departments from $30,000 to between $100,000 and $120,000.

Dr. George L. Johnson, chairman of a special committee from the Southwest Civic Association, asked $30,000 for the purchase of three new hose wagons and a fire engine for No. 4 Engine Company, which is the fourth oldest in the city.

During the morning session the Washington Board of Trade, represented by George C. Shinn and Dr. Lleyellyn Jordan, of the bridge committee, asked appropriations to finance an engineering study of plans for replacing Chain Bridge and Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge across Anacostia River.

Bridges Declared Safe.

E. A. Schmidt, of the United States engineer's office, said that it had been discovered that steel junked in the razing of the Aqueduct Bridge was in a crystalized state and shattered like cast iron.

The subcommittee summoned Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, and obtained testimony that both Chain and the Calvert Street Bridge are safe, an inspection having recently been made.

Erection of a field house in Palisades Park was asked by Mrs. Joseph R. Lyddane and Mrs. C. E. Robb. Mrs. Mabel Hubbel, of the Kenilworth Community Council, asked for improvements in the playgrounds in her community.

Funds for the education of World War orphans were asked by Maj. Gen. P. C. Harris, U. S. A., retired.

Suit for Tax Reduction Lost By Risk Firm

Virginia Court Decides Rent Drop Does Not Fix Assessment.

Richmond, March 23 (AP).—The State Supreme Court in an opinion in a Norfolk case holds that a decline in rents is an important element, but not the final test in determining the fair value assessment on real estate, an examination of the opinion today revealed.

The opinion was handed down yesterday by Chief Justice Preston W. Campbell, in the case of the City of Norfolk versus The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. It reversed a judgment of the Norfolk corporation court, part 2, which reduced an assessment on the company's Norfolk building and remanded the case.

During the litigation the fact that the gross rental revenue from the property had dropped from $17,629.50 in 1925, to $6,205 in 1930, was stressed. The assessment had been fixed at $96,620, after a reduction of $16,320.

The court said also that "a retrospective view seems to tell us the assessors in 1930 were unduly optimistic and failed to gauge the extent of the depression in values of real estate."

The court added, however, that "equality of assessments is a major consideration and carries with it a just apportionment of the burdens of taxation."

Asserting that "it appears that this assessment is fair and ratable compared with other assessments in the block," the court said "if reduced it would place upon other properties a disproportionate charge."

"Moreover," said the opinion, "it does not appear that values reached are out of proportion to those fixed in the taxing of the district generally."

Carrier, Never Ill In 24 Years, to Quit

J. O. Ritter, Winchester, Began With Buggy

Winchester, Va., March. 23 (Spl.).—James O. Ritter, rural delivery carrier from the postoffice here, will retire next Saturday after nearly 24 years service in which he has never been off duty on sick leave.

Ritter began in 1911 on a 24-mile route which since has been extended to 29 miles. He used a horse and buggy for some years, but his present car serves the longer route in less than half the time his horse required for the shorter route.

Mr. Ritter is retiring to devote his time to the Greenwood Dairy Farm which he established some years ago, and is now one of the largest dairies in this section.

With his payments long overdue, the tenant anticipated the eviction of his family. The landlord finally appeared, but bringing instead of an eviction order a deed to the home and a "paid in full" receipt for the $200 balance.

Virginia D.A.R. Urge Jefferson Memorial Road

Close Session at Roanoke After Resolution on McIlwaine.

Roanoke, Va., March 23 (Spl.).—Two hundred Daughters of the American Revolution closed a three-day State conference here tonight following final reports, a scenic drive and tea and a memorial service.

The conference resolution deplored the death of Dr. H. R. McIlwaine, State librarian, and another requested the State librarian's office consider taking over Revolutionary period documents now in private hands in Hampden-Sydney.

A third resolution asked CWA authorities to construct a highway from Monticello to the University of Virginia, to be known as the Jefferson Memorial highway.

Closer cooperation of D. A. R. chapters in promoting the work of Children of the American Revolution was urged by Mrs. C. A. S. Sinclair, of Alexandria, National president of the C. A. R., in a talk before the conference yesterday, says the Associated Press.

Mrs. Lee Pennington, of Chevy Chase, Md., National organizing secretary of the C. A. R., also spoke.

Fair Fan Dancer Fanned Out By 24 Fanners' Fanning Fans

With Baltimore as the battleground, one of the fair hoofers who wielded a feathered fan to conceal—and reveal—her charms at the Chicago Century of Progress, will find out in court if 24 other fan dancers can steal her stuff and get away with it.

The 24 girls who are targets for the suit are appearing at a local theater in one act. The producers probably figured that if one fan dancer caused such a sensation at the Chicago Fair, 24 of 'em ought to set staid old Baltimore ablaze.

But Rosalia, a lone fan dancer, figures differently. Booked to appear at the same theater next week, she decided that it was too much to expect that her act would go over after the fan-dance-loving public had seen 24 such dancers the week before.

So Rosalia filed suit in Superior Court here today. The suit was filed by titling, which means that the exact nature of the complaint is not stated. But her publicity agent says an injunction will be asked to halt the 24 dancers from waving their fans—or something.

Incidentally, the press agent swears that the suit wasn't a publicity scheme. He insists Rosalia is really peeved.

To cap the climax, Sally Rand, most famous of the fan dancers, is in Baltimore this week, appearing at another theater.

Dry Decision May Set U. S. 'Booties' Free

Jailed Prohibition Act Violator Argues Way to Liberty.

Court Says Repeal Makes Law Inoperative From Now On.

The self-confessed dry law violator emerged from a cell and acted as his own counsel to obtain his freedom in a far-reaching decision which may encourage release of many others whose sentences are incomplete.

Sentenced last June to from a year to 18 months on charges of transporting whisky, Johnson petitioned Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue to release him on a writ of habeas corpus.

He cited recent United States Supreme Court decisons which held dry laws inoperative after repeal. William A. Gallagher, assistant United States attorney, retorted a judgment once entered was final.

Ordering Johnson released, Justice O'Donoghue ruled:

"This case presents a normal question. There are no legal precedents and the court is guided only by reason and analogy. I think the people have the right to declare what is their will and I think they have declared their will in making repeal of the eighteenth amendment unconstitutional."

Jack O'Hearne, now serving a nine-month sentence for contempt of court, which arose out of a prohibition violation, is the only man now in the District Jail who can trace his incarceration even indirectly to the repudiated law.

Johnson's petition was written by him from a study he made of the case while in jail.

Justice O'Donoghue pointed out the difference between repeal by legislative action and repeal by the people. The latter, he said was "an outspoken repudiation without reservation," and was therefore to be considered as nullifyng all sentences based on violation of the eighteenth amendment.

Should other Federal court jurisdictions follow the decision, it will result in the release of every man or woman now "doing time" for liquor-law infractions.

He is a graduate of Gettysburg (Pa.) College and Gettysburg Theological Seminary, and had been serving as supply pastor since February 1.

Old County Books Found Multilated By Union Troops

Harrisonburg, Va., March 23 (Spl.).—While removal of Shenandoah County records to the mountains prevented their destruction during the War Between the States, it recently has been discovered that some were mutilated by Federal troops immediately after the Lee surrender, when Woodstock was under a provost government.

One of the mutilated books recently discovered is the old county court minute book for 1806 to 1808. Pages were torn out and a number cut in two.

A message written in pencil was left on one of the pages to indicate the bitter feeling at that time.

The mutilation and the penciled note were discovered by genealogists studying the old records for data on their ancestors.

Scientific Study to Determine Best Fishing Waters in Parks

Hope to Remedy "Hit-or-Miss" Method of Stocking Streams; Agriculture Department Finds 'Dobe Brick Is Good Building Material.

By Robert F. Whitney.

Washington anglers who seek trout and bass in the mountain streams of the George Washington and Monongahela National Forests and Shenandoah National Park will be interested to know that those waters are to be studied scientifically for stocking with game fish.

As soon as weather permits, a party from the Bureau of Fisheries, headed by a skilled biologist, will make an actual assessment of the physical and biological characters of these streams.

The purpose of the survey is to end the old "hit-and-miss" methods of stream stocking. Many thousands of young trout and other game fish have in the past been released where there was not sufficient food to support them.

The survey will determine what streams are suitable for stocking and how many young fish they can support. In streams which have been found deficient in food material recommendations will be made on steps to increase food.

The program in the vicinity of Washington is a part of a country-wide survey of National forest and National park streams, which is being financed through a grant from the Public Works Administration. Dr. H. S. Davis, of the Bureau of Fisheries, will have general technical supervision.

Adobe brick—used in desert and semiarid regions as a building material from primitive times—has received the approval and sanction of the Department of Agriculture.

The department recommended the bricks as cheap material for farm-building construction. With clay loam, straw, water and with unskilled labor, the farmer can make excellent buildings which cost little, it was said.

Methods of construction of such buildings with detailed drawings are incorporated in a bulletin recently published by the department.

Research has also brought out that such construction can be used in humid climates if the adobe is plastered with a thin coating of cement. A. A. H. Miller, of the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering, is the author of the study.

Every time old Mother Earth has the shakes, the seismograph of the Coast and Geodetic Surcey marks it down right here in Washington. Calculations made there centered the recent Salk Lake City quake in the Wasatch Mountains east of the city. The mild Central American quake of a few days before was near the southern border of San Salvador, experts said.

The individual heated soapstone for each worshipper was an essential for comfort in church on cold winter days during the early years of the nineteenth century.

The Smithsonian Institution has just obtained a common type of heating plant of that period. It is from the historic old Friends meeting house at Sandy Spring, Md., sometimes attended by President Hoover while he was at the White House.

It consists of a cast-iron stove in which cord-wood was burned. With the stove is an iron rack, which was placed on top. As the churchgoer entered the room, each could take a heated soapstone on which to rest the feet during the service.

The stove was purchased in Baltimore in 1817 for $48. It and another stove in the meeting house remained in use until the spring of 1933. In their heyday they represented the most efficient type of church heating known.

1934 Maryland Crop Reduction Is Anticipated

14 Per Cent Decrease in Tobacco Yield Is Expected.

Total acreage of field crops seeded this spring in Maryland will be slightly less than in 1933, the Maryland Crop Reporting Service, College Park, reports.

Tobacco will show the greatest reduction, with the crop estimated at 27,000 acres, against 32,000 acres last year, a drop of 14 per cent.

In commenting yesterday on leaf statistics, Richard C. Ross, agricultural statistician for Maryland, said: "The decrease is noteworthy in view of the fact that farmers are showing reluctance to sign up under the Government reduction drive."

Prevailing low prices and the unusually poor harvest of last year resulting from severe August storms are believed to be largely responsible for this decrease in planting.

The corn crop is expected to be 3 per cent less than that of 1933, being harvested from 543,000 acres instead of 560,000.

Decreases, as compared to the 1933 output, of 10 per cent in oats acreage and 2 per cent in the barley area are indicated.

Hay is expected to show an increase of 2 per cent. Likewise, there will be a slight increase in the potato harvest. No change is shown in the acreage of soy beans and cow peas.

Dairy Juggled Roanoke Price, Witness States

Mart Was "Demoralized," Hearing on Virginia Bill Is Told.

Richmond, March 23 (AP).—William P. Hazlegrove, of Roanoke, charged the Cold Springs Dairy there with price cutting and the "demoralization" of the dairy industry in four neighboring counties at a hearing on the milk-control bill before Gov. George C. Peery today.

With C. Wilson Beck, president of the Virginia State Dairymen's Association, he was one of the leaders of a delegation urging the Governor to sign the bill.

Opposed were representatives of distributing organizations and several dairy farmers, headed by Judge W. S. Snow, of Alexandria; Delegate Frank Moore, of Rockbridge County, and Frank Rennie, jr., of the Virginia Dairy Co.

Hazlegrove accused the Cold Springs group with cutting the price of milk from 12 to 10 cents per quart in Roanoke soon after its organization in July, 1933.

Four other distributors in the area were forced, Hazlegrove said, to drop their prices to the same level. Shortly afterward the price was raised to 12 cents.

"Eight days later the Cold Springs Dairy cut the price back to 10 cents again," he said, "and demoralized that market. They have kept it demoralized for a year."

Hazlegrove's remarks came after the opponents said the bill was undemocratic and would not function.

Republicans Study Ninth District Race

G. O. P. Still Undecided on Nomination.

Bristol, Va., March 23 (AP).—Whether the old "Fighting Ninth" will offer a champion to do battle with John W. Flannagan, Democratic standard bearer for Congress, is expected to be determined in the near future.

The Republican District committee adopted a resolution declaring that a nomination should be made, but as yet no definite action for a convention has been taken.

J. Powell Royall, of Tazewell, candidate last year for Lieut. Governor; Robert H. Woods, of Pearisburg, campaign manager for the Republicans in 1933; Fred Parks, of Abingdon, and several others have been mentioned as possible nominees.

D. C. Border Bill Is Signed By President

signed the District-Virginia boundary bill.

The law authorizes appointment of a commission which would study claims of the District, the Federal Government and private citizens. The commisison would be comprised of three persons, one selected by the President, another by the Governor of Virginia and the third by the first two.

Just where the District line runs along the Virginia side of the river has been a matter of dispute for many years. Improvements made along the Virginia side of the river have changed the southern boundary in many respects since it was fixed as the District line. One contention is that Roaches Run is the true boundary line, inasmuch as it once constituted the southern shore. If that is accepted, it would bring within the District considerable property which has been accepted for several years as in Virginia, including the Washington-Hoover Airports.

The boundary dispute has figured in many police cases, most notable of which was the Mary Baker murder, in which police jurisdiction was brought into question. It also has involved civil suits, right of the District of Virginia to tax property and dates back to the original grants made by King Charles to Lord Baltimore.

The bill was introduced by Representative Smith (Democrat), Virginia, and had the indorsement of various District organizations.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 23 (AP).—Galloping toward their biggest golfing "kill" since they last routed Bob Jones in the 1927 open championship at Oakmont, the American professional brigade today left the great Georgian struggling further in the ruck, still shackled by putting handicaps, as the field reached the halfway stage of the $5,000 Masters' invitation tournament today over the cold, wind-swept Augusta National links.

Putting more like an old man with the palsy than the world champion who retired less than four years ago, Jones rallied only to the extent of clipping two strokes off his first day's score and posting a 74 alongside his previous 76 for a 36-hole total of 150.

The great Georgian succeeded in advancing from a tie for thirty-fifth place to a tie for twenty-eighth, but where he was only six strokes off the pace yesterday he was eight strokes behind tonight as the brilliant Horton Smith, the "Joplin Ghost," rode out alone in front of the pack with scores of 70—72—142—two under par.

Failing lamentably and to the intense disappointment of a gallery of more than 500 fans on the last five holes, Jones blew his chances of gaining on the leaders by three-putting two successive greens, the fourteenth and fifteenth, and then capping the climax by missing a simple putt of 18 inches on the sixteenth green. His hands seemed to shake and his control was so uncertain that he finally stopped and remarked to a friend, "It's got so it's funny now."

Friends' Hopes Fall.

Only by a spectacular kind of comeback now over the closing two days of play can Jones hope to come even close to finishing inside the first 12—the money list—and giving his old rivals a battle down the stretch. After today's faulty exhibition, when his short range game completely offset his brilliant shot-making through the fairways, not even the most ardent Jones fans entertained confidence in the ability of their former idol to stage much of a rally.

The law of averages, it would seem, should favor him tomorrow and Sunday, but so far he has played exactly like a perfect host, happy to see his old friends having a good time but quite unequal to the personal job of keeping pace with them after a lapse of four seasons.

While Bob all but faded out of the picture, the gallery was entertained with a succession of scoring thrills, including a sensational 69 by the home club pro, Ed Dudley, for a new competitive course record, and the most exciting of all golf shots—a hole-in-one—by Ross (Sandy) Somerville, Canadian Scot who held the United States amateur championship two years ago.

Somerville consoled himself for an otherwise weird round, a 78, which left him in the rear with 160, by plunking a mashie niblick shot to the 145-yard seventh green and watching the ball hop into the cup on the first bounce. It was the first "ace" to be scored on the Augusta National layout.

Dudley's great round, 3 shots under par, gave him a 36-hole total of 143 and a tie for second place with Bill Burke, of Cleveland, 1931 National Open champion, who added a fine 71 to his par 72 of the day before.

Three-Putts First.

Dudley started off by 3-putting the first hole, but quickly got the range. From the fourth to the twelfth, inclusive, a stretch of nine holes, he had six birdies. During this scoring spree he had only one long putt, a 12-footer on the sixth. On four other holes he stuck iron shots so "stiff" to the pen that the birdies were easy and he chipped in from 15 feet off the eighth green. He 3-putted the fourteenth.

The field was so closely bunched that no fewer than 20 professionals and one "business man" amateur, Johnny Dawson, of Chicago, were within 5 shots of each, making it a wide-open fight for the next two days. Two of today's best rallies were put on by the veteran MacDonald Smith, of Nashville, and Ralph Stonehouse, young Indianapolis pro, each with a 70 that gave them totals of 144 and a tie in fourth place with Jimmie Hines, of Timber Point, N. Y. Hines reversed the process by tacking a 74 to his first day's 70.

Playing with Jones, Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., again outshot the Georgian and scored a subpar 71 for the 36-hole aggregate of 145. In this bracket Runyan was tied for seventh with Craig Wood, Al Espinosa and Leo Diegel, all among the professional favorites.

Out in Front of Star Golf Field

This Chicago professional added a 72 to his 70 of last Thursday for a total of 142, which is topping the elite of golfdom gathered for Bobby Jones' Masters Tournament at Augusta.

Jones Needs Some Antagonism, Not Sympathy, Says Gallico

By Paul Gallico.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 23 (Spl.).—Bob Jones has now played two rounds of tournament golf and has shot 76-74 for 150, which is not bad golf as golf goes. But we are so used to Bob's pulling rabbits out of hats that we join the moaning that is going up on the fairways and around the greens and in the moaning room on the second floor, until I am beginning to wonder about the value of sympathy to a competitor and wondering if what Jones needs at this point isn't a little more antagonism. A few guys in the gallery making nasty remarks, a couple of words dropped within earshot that will make him boil. Can it be that a man can have too many friends, too much sympathy, too many good wishers? What was it that used to keep Ty Cobb up there so long? Friendship or bitterness, love or hatred?

I have been at Jones' heels, in his galleries, on his tees, for every shot of his comeback round and I have never been so conscious of mass sympathy and mass love for an athlete before. The spectators are fairly perishing for Jones, heaving their shoulders with every putt, trying to coax them into the holes, leaning with long iron shots to get them to bend in toward the holes, and tramping along behind him discussing Bob's utter failure with his putter. The air is full of failure.

Feels It Deeply.

Nobody has thought to tell Jones the real truth yet that, considering he has been away from competitive golf for two or three years, he is putting forward and putting darn well. No miracles, mind you, but he is still in there scoring and hitting woods and irons that might well be the dream of every golfer. Every one wants, so much, to see Jones win. He seems to feel it so deeply, that an importance beyond all proportion rides in every shot.

But, along with strangers who wish him well, the gallery is packed with Bob's personal friends. His father and his wife march on the fringe of the spectators, friends galore from Atlanta have come over. Friends from New York have come South to see him play. No man has had so many true and loyal friends. No man in sport has been loved by so many fine men as this Jones. And each shot he misses, each little putt he jabs at and that skids past the holes, he blushes and feels ashamed, not for himself, but for all of the friends who love him so well and who, so dreadfully, wish him to win. This is a terrific burden to carry.

Burden of Friends.

But beyond this there rests on his shoulders the burden of friends far-flung over the world and his brilliant reputation. This fluffed pitch shot laps up against the shores of England. That missed putt is causing the friendly inhabitants of St. Andrews in Scotland to shake their heads and wonder what has become of their Bobby. Wherever golf is played, the radio and the wires and the columns of the papers are hunted for news of Jones. I doubt whether there has ever been such a strain on four rounds of golf where so little actually has been at stake. Jones didn't need to come back. He doesn't need to win to enhance his reputation or to improve his financial status. Every missed putt from now on grows in Bob's mind. Can you imagine how sick he must have been of hearing commiserations and expressions of regret and sympathy in the moaning room after the golf is over? A man can stand an immeasurable lot of hatred, but it takes very little pity to break him down.

Small wonder then that Jones walks the fairways miserably and with a leaden heart. Marching down the eighth, he came up behind me and said: "Every time I come up to a green I start to shake."

On the sixteenth he played a beautiful second from behind a tree out of the rough to a narrow green and put the ball 14 inches from the hole. He began missing the putt as he neared the green. He became convinced that he was going to miss it as he stepped onto the carpet and the actual physical missing merely followed in the course of events. Bobby Cruikshank was standing near.

"In the mind—in the mind," he said and tapped his head. "It's all up in the mind."

Sinks 10-Footer.

A great roar went up from the crowd on the thirteenth when Jones sank a 10-footer for a birdie two. But later Bob told us that if the ball hadn't gone into the hole it would have gone 8 feet past and that he stood there quaking as he watched it.

Well, the story tightens. Tomorrow Jones either becomes a man of miracles with a roaring comeback, or he passes definitely from the picture. He is eight shots behind. And should he pass, the story will be done, because without him this is just another of the winter circuit tournaments, the same fields that have been playing from Frisco to Caliente, from Caliente to Florida, and from Florida North.

Of course, there are other golfers in the field besides Jones. Mac Smith may win the show. Ed Dudley broke the course record in competition today with a 69. A lot of fine golf is being played. But all the world cares about is the superhuman champion who suddenly has had a fear in his brain, who has become as one sick, who is therefore quite human. The curious public wants no superman. When they stick pins into their heroes they want to see him bleed. And when they bleed they give them more of the measure than is good for them. Has any athlete suffered so publicly as Jones? What will tomorrow bring?

North-South Won By Miss Glutting

Pinehurst, N. C., March 23 (AP).—Charlotte Glutting, of South Orange, N. J., won the historic North and South Women's Golf Championship in her first attempt today, turning back Deborah Very, of Worcester, Mass., 2 and 1, in the final.

A brisk northeaster, bringing occasional rain, handicapped the players and slowed up the No. 3 course so much that both were fully 20 to 30 yards shorter on their tee shots than during previous matches.

Miss Glutting, out in 44 and 1 down, came back in 41 for an 85, conceding her par 4 on the home hole which wasn't played.

The Massachusetts girl, striving for the first important victory of her career, had Miss Glutting 2 down through the first eight holes and needed only a 1-foot putt for a half on the ninth, but missed it. Miss Glutting squared the match on the tenth hole, winning it with a par 4 and was never down thereafter.

Bruce, of Lexington, Off for Albany Camp

Lexington, Va., March 23 (Spl.).—Spencer Bruce, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Bruce, of near Lexington, has left here to enter the training camp of the Albany Club, International League.

His experience includes two seasons' pitching for Fort Defiance in the Augusta County League and some service with a team in Richmond. After being tried out by the Washington Nationals last season, he was signed up by Albany.

Klein Raises Flag Hopes Of Cubs

May Keep 9 Hurlers; Grimm Shows Form; Rivalry Is Keen.

By Brian Bell.

LOS ANGELES, March 23 (AP).—Chicago's Cubs have added the biggest gun in the National League to their attacking forces for the 1934 campaign and everybody from the rawest recruit to Manager Charlie Grimm believes Charles Herbert (Chuck) Klein will be just what the doctor ordered for the Wrigley entry.

Klein and his batting potency will add many runs to the Chicago totals and his mates think these will be enough to insure a world series appearance next autumn.

Klein, of course, will patrol an outpost from April on but his associates in the outfield have not yet been nominated. The club has four other outfielders, Kiki Cuyler, Riggs Stephenson, Babe Herman and George Tucker Stainback. Several strong combinations are possible.

In the early games Klein played left, Cuyler took care of center and Herman was in right, but this left the hard hitting Stephenson and Stainback, a sensational recruit from Los Angeles, of the Pacific Coast League, out in the cold. The hitting of "Old Hoss" and the speed of "Tuck" may force a recount later.

Grimm in Good Shape.

Manager Grimm, entirely free from the twinges of lumbago which plagued him last spring and did his game no good, is cutting up like a youngster around first base and hitting hard and often.

Billy Herman, at second, Bill Jurges at short and Woody English, at third, will complete the infield. Augie Galan, who played some great ball for San Francisco last season, and Stanley Hack, back from Albany, will back up the starting quartet. Dolph Camilli is understudying Manager Grimm.

The club has only nine pitchers in camp and may keep all of them, but a good early season guess is that if one has to go it will not be one of the three recruits. The Cubs have a trio of freshmen pitchers good for 68 victories last year in AA ball. Dick Ward won 25 games for Los Angeles, Roy Joiner contributed 22 to the cause of Oakland and Bill Lee was credited with 21 for Columbus.

Lee, a big boy who seems to know how to pitch, has been troubled with influenza but until he fell sick, he showed as much stuff as any of the regulars. Joiner is the only left-hander on the staff. The holdover pitchers are Guy Bush, Lonnie Warneke, Charlie Root, Pat Malone, Lyle Tinning, and Lynn Nelson.

Race Classic To Golden Miller

U. S.-Owned Horse Is Second; 20 Entries Fail to Finish.

AINTREE, England, March 23 (U.P.).—Clearing every obstacle with a powerful grace, Golden Miller, Dorothy Paget's big-footed bay gelding, closed fast today to beat out 29 rivals and captured the Grand National, establishing a new record for the cruel Aintree course.

Rated perfectly by Jockey G. Wilson, Golden Miller stayed within striking distance during the first journey over the dangerous jumps, moved up to a contending position as the last obstacle was cleared, and put on a fighting finish on the flat with Delaneige, the American entry of J. B. Snow.

Delaneige sprinted nobly down the final 350 yards on the flat, but Golden Miller ran like a horse possessed, passed his rival as they neared the cheering thousands in the grandstand, and won by 5 full lengths, going away.

Delaneige Second.

Golden Miller's time for the 4 miles 856 yards was 9:20 2-5, lowering the record of 9:28 set last year by Mrs. F. Ambrose Clarke's Kellsboro Jack.

Twenty of the runners fell or failed to come home, leaving only ten of the original to finish in this order: Golden Miller, Delaneige, Thomond II, Forbra, Uncle Batt, Blue Peter II, Gregalach, Apostasy, Annandale and Remus.

Actually Remus did not rate as a finisher, for he had failed to jump the last two obstacles.

This was the second time in as many years that a woman owned the wininng Grand National horse. Golden Miller has been the property of Miss Paget for some years, but Mrs. Clarke bought last year's winner, Kellsboro Jack, from her husband only a few weeks before the race. Golden Miller is a bay gelding by Goldcourt—Miller's Pride and runs in a spectacular style.

Held under ideal weather conditions and on a course that was nearly firm, the Grand National was a magnificent race and the outcome a most popular one. Bookmakers lost fortunes, as the three leaders were heavily backed. Golden Miller had been the favorite for weeks before the race, and only in the final call-over today was he made a secondary choice. As they went to the post, F. Ambrose Clark's Sirley Boy and Maj. Noel Furling's Really True were favorites at 100 to 9, while Golden Miller and Delaneige were held at 100 to 8.

Purse of $40,000.

The race brought Miss Paget a purse of some $40,000, but meant millions of dollars to sweepstake ticket holders and bettors the world over.

The lead shifted constantly as the early hurdles were cleared the first time around. By the time the course was once complete, Delaneige was slightly ahead of Gregalach, the 1929 winner; Forbra, which won in 1932, and Golden Miller.

Forbra had taken command as they passed the difficult canal turn obstacle, where the race was three-fourths complete. Delaneige had dropped back to second place, with Golden Miller third.

So they raced on until the last hurdle was passed, with Thomond II coming up fast to pass Forbra for third money, and with Golden Miller running away from Delaneige for the win.

Goldstein and Quarles Are Rematched

BOBBY GOLDSTEIN, former University of Virginia Southern Conference Champion, has been signed in a return engagement with Norment Quarles, of the University of North Carolina for April 23 in Richmond. Quarles took a dubious decision over the Washington lightweight in a recent Richmond bout that was witnessed by 4,000.

While accepting the match, Goldstein's brother-manager, Goldie Ahearn, has asked Promoter Walter Heenan to arrange for the bout over the four-round distance instead of three rounds as in previous engagements. Quarles was weakening rapidly at the conclusion of their last bout, and Goldstein's handlers feel their charge will be able to defeat him decisively at the longer route.

An effort was made to book the bout in North Carolina under the promotion of Ad Warren, but both parties to the engagement believe that Richmond is the logical site for a return bout in view of the tremendous interest aroused and the good fight turned in the last time they fought there.

Lopez Leaves Holdouts, Signs for $12,000 Pay

Orlando, Fla., March 23 (U.P.).—Al Lopez, star Brooklyn Dodgers' catcher, quit the baseball holdout ranks today when he signed a contract supposedly calling for a yearly salary of $12,000.

The signing was done after a 30-minute conference with Bob Quinn, business manager of the Dodgers.

If the estimate of $12,000 salary is correct, Lopez will be the highest paid member of the Dodger Club. He returned to his home in Tampa after signing and will join the Dodgers in training tomorrow.

Travis Starts Two Double Killings

Cronin Crew Pounds Out Nine Hits Off Harder and Connally.

Error by Berger Opens Way for Two-Run Rally in First.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor, The Post).

BILOXI, Miss., March 23.—Walter Johnson's Cleveland Indians came, saw and were conquered this afternoon when the Nats tasted big league competition for the first time this season and manifested their liking for it right off the bat, as it were. The score was 5 to 2, as they say down here at 1:55 p. m.

Old Biloxi did nobly by Clark Griffith, turning out to the number of 3,000 to warm the coffers of his heart at six bits per person, and it was a nice day all-around for the Washington Club, what with a couple of rookie pitchers, Ray Prim and Ed Linke, earning their feed by holding the Indians to seven hits.

The victory was sweetened, too, by the presence of a pair of veterans, Mel Harder and Sarge Connally, in the box for the Indians, against whom the Nats unpeeled their batting eyes to the extent of nine solid knocks.

Two Runs in First.

It is only fair, however, to mention that Washington's first two runs issued from a panicky situation in the Cleveland infield in the very first inning when Bozie Berger and Odell Hale handled the ball like total strangers to present the Nats with two large and luscious unearned tallies.

Among the items of satisfaction gleaned from the game by Manager Cronin were:

1. Johnny Stone's two smashing singles in three trips to the plate.

2. Ed Linke's four-inning shift on the mound in which he allowed only one hit.

3. Gus Dugas' solid two-base whack into left field.

4. Two nifty double plays started by Cecil Travis at third base.

5. His own rollicking triple into left center field in the third inning.

On the other side of the ledger Cronin saw inscribed:

1. His own grammar-school error on an easy chance in the second inning.

2. Linke's splurge of wildness in the eighth when he walked Averill and nicked Vosmik on the arm.

3. The batting weakness of Dave Harris in his only time at bat when he was held to a single and drove in only one run.

The Indians were not long in getting acquainted with this fellow Prim. With two out in the first inning, Earl Averill smacked the busher for a solid single to left and broke into a wide smile as he reached the base. A moment later Prim caught him leaning on the wrong foot and wiped him off with a throw to Kuhel.

Praised as a fielder by Manager Johnson, who voiced misgivings about his hitting, Bozie Berger, the former Washington high school boy, turned his boss around on the first ball pitched when he made a mess of Buddy Myer's grounder to second base and started the Nats off on a two-run rally.

Stone smacked a single into center field and Manush banked one to the same spot. Averill's throw to Hale at third attempting to nip Stone got away from the third baseman, who recovered and threw it to second to head off Manush, despite the fact that the base was uncovered. Myer had scored on Manush's hit and Stone rattled home while the Indians were throwing the ball around.

Jones Rides Double on Victor

Gelding Holds on After Renewed's Challenge Near Finish.

Favorites In First Four Races Score; Vishnu Is Triumphant.

TROPICAL PARK, March 23 (AP).—J. T. Connelly's Machilla, a hard one to guess, again confounded the talent when he won the mile and a furlong fifth event here this afternoon. This gelding, which has started in everything from six-furlong dashes to a race of a mile and three-sixteenths over the turf course at Hialeah, has now won four races this winter and on each occasion he paid a big price. Those who were fortunate enough to guess that he was going to upset calculations today received $22.40 for $2.

With Bobby Jones in the saddle, Machilla registered by a scant head over N. E. Stanton's Renewed, which was attempting to give favorite players five victories in a row. S. J. Loomis' Impeach was third, a length behind. The time was 1:51 2-5.

Double for Jones.

Bobby Jones rang up a double astride the upset horse. The boy gave his mount a faultless ride, rating him close up in third place until the final quarter mile. Spartan Lady, a speedy long shot, cut out the running for about 7 furlongs, then dropped back fast. Jones sent Machilla around the leaders and Renewed, making a late bid, challenged powerfully, but Machilla held on just long enough.

After three vain attempts, Vishnu met a field to his liking and easily captured the opening purse by a length and a half. Billies Orphan beat Dornoch a length for secondary honors. The field got off in Indian file, but Vishnu, even-money choice, broke in front and never was headed. Dornoch rushed up fast after breaking slowly, but tired chasing the pace and gave way to Billies Orphan.

Merry Bud Triumphs.

Hustled into a substantial early lead by Don Meade, Merry Bud was an easy winner of the juvenile dash for maiden fillies. Backed down to $5.60 favoritism, the daughter of Brown Bud passed the judges a length and a half clear of Migrate. The latter closed fast and earned the place by a like margin over Scrambled Eggs, an aptly named newcomer by Upset out of Goose-Egg. Polly Hundred, heavily weighted, and well supported, was badly outrun.

Form players enjoyed their first straight success as a result of the driving victory of Bernie K in the third number. Three horses passed the pagoda pole heads apart, with Bardstown second and Tit Tat third. Bardstown ran Curling down early and looked a winner until Bernie K. staged a strong stretch bid and got up in the last few jumps to return $4.30. Tit Tat made up a world of ground to be third.

Wedding Ring Scores.

Wedding Ring was the fourth consecutive choice to win, but it took the gelding's best to head Style Corner after a long duel. Hunter, on Style Corner, appeared to ride Litzenberger a bit close at the far turn. Wedding Ring, on the inside from the start, did not head his rival until a few yards from the finish. Don't Blush came steadily through the stretch to annex third money. Wedding Ring paid $5.30.

Eddie Litzenberger kept Sequoia, a plater that has been stopping in short races, going a full mile in cheap company to win the sixth contest. Sequoia led throughout, and, with "Litzy" holding him together admirably, won by a head. Sequoia paid $8.30, and gave his rider a double. This was another blanket finish, with Lawless Lady, Try Fair and Mint de Mie following the winner across the pay-off line.

Litzenberger, strong riding Calgary (Canada) apprentice, equaled Silvio Coucci's feat of the previous day by completing a triple astride the $18.30 shot, Gibby's Choice, in the finale. High Socks was second a length back and a head before El Puma.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Abraham Lincoln was the only patent holder to become President of the United States. Other Chief Executives, principally Washington, invented various devices but did not seek patent protection from the Government.

Lincoln's device was a collapsible barge for buoying up river boats and other vessels so that their draft was lessened enough to permit passage over sandbars and other obstructions without discharging the cargo. It was his plan to have the buoy attached to the side of the ship. It was to be compressed into a small space when not in use, but it would expand when air was forced into the rubberized fabric bags which were the chief part of the equipment. The tops and bottoms of the chambers were to be of metal and wood, with waterproof cloth sides to permit them to fold up when not inflated.

Strange as it seems, the principle of using buoyant tanks attached to the sides of sunken vessels to float them is widely practiced today.

Although water can be heated only to its boiling point and no hotter, steam can be heated to a very great degree without changing its composition. The boiling point of water varies according to the pressure it is under. As demonstrated by Dr. Andrade before the Royal Institution of London, it is possible to heat steam up to a point where it will light a match or a cigarette.

Dear Al: Tropical Park, March 23

Horsemen, stabling their charges here, gained a point today when the track announced that it would supply guards to watch all entries for a period of three hours before their post time. Course officials said this service would be extended to horses stabled at Hialeah Park, if they are vanned over here in time. This is taken to mean that the track will become responsible for the condition of the guarded horses instead of handlers of the entry. Several suspended trainers claimed that persons unknown to them had stimulated their horses at Hialeah. Bennings, Inc., came through with two winners today, which is our low mark for the meeting. They were Vishnu and Bernie K. Both paid off in cigarette coupons.

BILL.

First race—Deadeye Dick ran a keen race for me the other day, and I see no reason why we should not go back to this colt. Neon appears second best. Canobie Lake to take care of the others.

Second race — Aunt Flor seems best suited of these 3-year-old sprinters. Litzenberger, in brilliant form now, will do the riding. Macadam figures close to the top one. Luck In to wiggle into the money.

Third race—Idle Victory will have the up-and-at-'em Coucci in the saddle, and I expect the combination to pay dividends. Wise Prince is reported to be a fast worker, but has Yowell aboard. Manuel could create a major surprise.

Fourth race — Albert Robertson will parade Young John to the post tomorrow. He is getting live mounts thes days and I understand this one has been primed for a sizzling mile. Cannon Law will find this cheap opposition to his liking. Gracias may awake to cause trouble.

Fifth race—These high-class claimers are beating each other here in Florida and are hard to guess. I'm going to listen to Mike's hunch and put Gift of Roses on top. Clotho, off that last, is the one to beat. Quel Jeu for the show.

Sixth race—Big Beau is in rare form and I expect him to make it three in a row here. Stealing Away and Pastry to complete the money picture.

Fidducia Gets Big Chance At Portner's

He Who Stopped Irving Jumps Up to Battle With Reds Barry.

EVER since the night some weeks back when Freddy Fidducia dropped Henry Irving, the part-time beer truck driver, with a thud that caused all four tires on his schnapps wagon to go flat simultaneously, local fight fans have been clamoring (more or less feebly) for another sight of this apparently-so-good light-heavy, against bigger and better opposition. They will be given that sight Tuesday night when the New Jersey jaw jabber steps into the ring against Donald (Reds) Barry in the eight-round main event at Portner's.

Of course, when the fans began clamoring for bigger and better competition for Fidducia, they probably had no idea that the competition would be so much bigger and better. From Henry Irving to Reds Barry is a far cry, but no farther than some that have been navigated by other good light-heavy prospects. Bob Godwin, for instance, made his debut here by hammering Billy Schwartz into submission and it wasn't long before he was making passes at the redhead of Barry with enough success to emerge with three decisions in as many fights.

Other Opponents Sought.

The Portner's promoters did not arrange the jump from Irving to the elephantine division without trying to effect other plans. They first tried to obtain Godwin, but that worthy was too busy boxing out decisions over Florida opposition to be inveigled into a return to the North in this winter of continual snowstorms. Henry Firpo, the bald-headed youngster, was also otherwise occupied when Fidducia's name was mentioned, so Barry was chosen.

Many close followers of affairs fistic are of the opinion that Fidducia's 25 or 30 pound weight disadvantage will prove an advantage. They substantiate their belief by pointing out that Barry has campaigned with very little success against lighter and faster men who can neutralize his own speed, which is dazzling for a heavyweight. Joe Sekyra, Lee Ramage and Joe Knight, are among the lighter men who, in addition to Godwin, have decisioned the Southeast red-head. Against Charley Massera, another on whom he had a big weight pull, Barry managed to barely escape with a decision in his most recent battle.

VISHNU, clear of his field, opened wide lead in early part, saved ground, and won nicely in hand. BILLIE'S ORPHAN closed with a rush and outgamed DORNOCH. The latter was away poorly and had to make up a world of ground. CABOCHAN came from far back. MAREVE ran a fair race. GOLDEN EFFORT had speed for half a mile.

SECOND RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming prices, $2,000 to $1,000. For maiden 2-year-old fillies. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 2:51½. Off at 2:56½. Winner, W. F. MERRY BUD, running back to her previous good race, raced SCRAMBLED EGGS into defeat, then drew away and won nicely in hand. MIGRATE, away fast, closed with a rush in final furlong. SCRAMBLED EGGS displayed keen speed and showed good effort for first outing. ALANOVA was well up all the way. POLLY HUNDRED lacked speed and ran a poor race.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BERNIE K, $4.30, $3.00, $2.60; BARDSTOWN, $7.60, $4.20; TIT TAT, $5.30.

BERNIE K moved up gamely around turn, but was doing his best to win. BARDSTOWN ran into long lead turning out of back stretch, but weakened in last sixteenth. TIT TAT came around field and finished fast. CURLING had plenty of speed, but dropped back and came again at end. KING HOLLISTER had no mishap.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming price, $1,500. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:58. Off at 3:59. Winner, L. Friedman's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WEDDING RING, $5.30, $3.30, $2.50; STYLE CORNER, $6.10, $3.40; DON'T BLUSH, $3.00.

WEDDING RING, under good handling and on the inside, stood long drive samely to win. STYLE CORNER, on the outside all the way, bothered WEDDING RING some turning out of back stretch and held on well. DON'T BLUSH circled field and closed very fast. FERVID, outrun for half a mile, closed a big gap. FRED ALMY quit badly after showing early speed. GRANNY'S TRADE had no mishap.

MACHILLA, showing startling improvement over recent races, was kept close to the early pace, came around leaders entering stretch, and stood long drive samely. RENEWED, unable to take lead in early part, was rated along and finished with a rush. He was wearing the winner down. IMPEACH went up very fast in run down the back stretch and hung badly at end. SPARTAN LADY opened wide gap in early part, but tired fast in last quarter mile. FABIUS ran a fair race. ISLAM was outrun from the start.

Stocks Yield Fraction in Quiet Trading

New York, March 23 (AP).—Stocks today moped through the dullest trading since January 8, giving some ground on the average, although two or three groups offered resistance.

Wall street kept its eyes peeled for Washington news bulletins bearing on the automotive and rail negotiations, but heard nothing definite as to the probable outcome.

The motor labor leaders, who had declared another strike truce, seemed rather confident, though the direction the negotiations were taking remained officially undisclosed during market hours.

Group Activity Limited.

On the stock exchange, where transfers attained a total of only 792,070 shares, group activity was limited, being confined chiefly to alcohols, aircrafts and a handful of miscellaneous issues.

Liquor equities, it appeared, were being helped by estimates of favorable earnings for the current quarter, while the aviation shares no doubt profited by speculative hopes of Government buying for the military and naval services.

Schenley and National Distillers, Curtis Wright "A," Wright Aeronautical and United Aircraft were among the firmer representatives of their industries. Elsewhere, Servel had a good-sized turnover, coincident with news of management changes. Cudahy and Sun Oil got out of the general rut but were quiet.

General Motors Eased

General Motors contributed a good proportion of the day's dealings, easing a major fraction net. Nash and Chrysler were also down. Du Pont, Case, American Smelting, U. S. Smelting, General Electric, Union Carbide and Bethlehem Steel eased fractions to more than a point. U. S. Steel and American Telephone were narrow, the latter being especially quiet.

Some of the light and power issues developed a slight upward trend in the morning, but the improvement got nowhere. Rails stagnated.

Business news had a fairly cheerful cast. Freight loadings last week showed a better than seasonal gain of around 13,000 cars, making another new high since last October. Some of the gain, it was thought, could be traced to larger movements of merchandise against the possibility of industrial tie-up.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—A less buoyant tone was registered on the stock exchange today. Profittaking developed in various sections, especially West African mining issues and electric shares. However, moderate support of gilt-edged securities, foreign goods, motor and transatlantic issues helped to establish a steady closing tone.

Paris—Although prices on the bourse failed to react to the better advices from Wall street, quotations were steadier at the close as a result of an upturn in rentes. Trading was inactive as speculators watched the effect of the government's borrowing abroad and delevopments in the Stavisky investigations.

Berlin—Quietness prevailed on the bourse, but quotations closed slightly better. Limits, potash and artificial silk shares were higher.

Security Exchange Bill Opponents Have Enjoyed Unusual Success in Their Fight for Changes; Still Further Modifications Needed.

By Ralph West Robey.

Discussion of the security exchange bill has become too technical to be any longer of much interest to the general public. There still are a few broad questions involved but by and large these have given way to wrangling over the specific wording of the measure and the degree to which this or that reform or regulation shall go. Such a shift in the emphasis, nevertheless, should not be taken as an indication that the controversary has become any less important or that those opposing the bill have been won over to the proponent's point of view.

In fact just the reverse is true. Opposition to the revised bill is, if anything, more vigorous and better organized than it was against the original measure. That this should be the case is easy to understand. In the first place the revised draft is based upon exactly the same philosophy as the original. This is that the whole business of organized exchanges is of questionable value to society and that it would be better to eliminate these markets completely than to run the risk of a continuation of the abuses that characterized speculation in securities in recent years. I do not mean by this that those who drafted the measure deliberately set out to eliminate organized exchanges, but simply that in their minds such a contingency would be less serious than a repetition of those practices that they, and the public, so strongly disapprove.

Margin Provision Indicates Type of Change Involved.

The result of this attitude being carried over into the revised measure has been to limit the changes to those portions of the bill which as originally drafted unquestionably would have hurt the public directly. Thus, in the original it was provided that the margin requirements would apply to existing accounts. This would have necessitated extensive liquidation with a consequent fall of security values. In the revised measure, accordingly, the margin requirements are made to apply only to new commitments for the next five years.

On the other hand, the really significant aspect of the margin provision remains much the same in the revised bill. This is the question of the advisability of fixing a statutory margin requirement. In the current draft the requirement is not as high, and, because of allowing for some discretion in closing out accounts in which the statutory minimum is impaired, is not quite so rigid. The fact remains, nevertheless, that in the revised draft, just as in the original, we still have a provision based upon the idea that the public will be protected by having a high margin. It seems to me that this is not true. I can see good reasons for eliminating all marginal trading through brokerage houses, but virtually no reason for fixing a statutory minimum.

Success of Opposition Has Encouraged the Fight.

This carrying over of the same philosophy in the revised measure is only one reason for the continued opposition to the measure. Another, and, perhaps, equally important reason, is the fact the opponents have had more success in fighting this measure than has been the case with any other piece of legislation under the New Deal. This success has not been great enough to justify their concluding that the measure can be defeated, but it does provide some ground for believing that if a sufficiently good fight is made the measure may be whipped into reasonably good shape.

On the whole I think that this is a healthy attitude to have among the opponents. In due time, and probably in the present session of Congress, we shall get some security exchange regulation. It simply is a question of getting an act that regulates and reforms, rather than destroys. For this reason it is to be hoped that the opponents continue their fight. In many particulars, notably in shifting the control of the banks' lending back to the Reserve System, the present draft is far superior to the original measure. There still, however, is much to be done before the measure should go on the statute books.

Goods Markets.

New York, March 23 (A.P.).—The lower prices on print cloths available in some quarters led to moderate selling today from second-hands, but the general market tone in gray and unfinished cloths was one of uncertainty pending relief from political and labor uncertainties. Rayon sales are light as producers hesitate to go into May production with the compensatory tax unsettled. Silk prints are moving in moderate quantities. Wool goods continue quiet. Burlaps were easier on light trading.

Wool Market.

Boston, March 23 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agr.).—The wool market continued quiet. A light demand for wool fostered more or less pressure for lower wool prices. The volume of business in wool, however, remained too limited to establish any change in price levels. In view of the extremely small demand, prices of some types of domestic wool were slightly in the buyer's favor, especially on very ordinary and inferior offerings. At the same time, there was a decided resistance to price pressure by many holders.

Bond Prices Rise Slightly in Dull Dealing

Domestic Corporate Issues Edge Up 1-10 of Point; Federals Firm.

New York, March 23 (AP).—Dullness and mild irregularities ruled in today's bond market as most traders and investors continued to exhibit extreme caution in the matter of new commitments.

Total transfers dwindled to $10,258,000, par value, from $12,290,000 yesterday. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues managed to edge up one-tenth of a point, however, for its first gain of the week.

Business and trade news was still optimistic, but labor troubles seemed to cloud the brightness of the economic picture. That there were hopes the Administration would avert any major strike was shown by the fact that offerings, during most of the session, were about as scarce as bids.

List of Gainers.

Among gainers of fractions to around a point were some issues of Alleghany Corporation, American & Foreign Power, American Water Works, Armour & Co., Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago & Great Western, Chile Copper, Cleveland Union Terminal, Duquesne Light, Great Northern, International Hydro-electric, International Telephone, Milwaukee Electric, New Orleans Public Service, Southern Pacific, Studebaker, Texas Corporation and Utilities Power & Light.

Losers of similar amounts included some loans of Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Warner Bros., Pennsylvania, National Dairy, Missouri Pacific, Dodge Bros., Erie, Hudson Coal, Illinois Central, Chicago & North Western, St. Paul, American Rolling Mill and American I. G. Chemical.

Some Securities Firmed.

German obligations were again off 1 or 2 or more points on word that the quota of foreign exchange allowed importers had been reduced from 45 to 35 per cent of the 1931 requirements and that it had been decided to restrict the use of foreign commercial credits by 30 per cent.

The Argentines rallied 1 to 2 and the Japanese improved. Dutch East Indies issues were off around 4 points in a few sales and French bonds were easy.

Curb Market Closes Mixed; Sales Light

New York, March 23 (AP).—In one of the quietest sessions this year, the curb market closed mildly irregular today. Aside from a few specialties, closing quotations were generally of fractional variation.

J. J. Newberry swung up for a three-point advance while gains of a point or more prevailed in shares of Gorham Manufacturing and Novadel Agene.

American Gas & Electric lost ⅞ of a point but other public utilities including Electric Bond & Share yielded less. Gulf and Humble Oils improved fractions, but Standard Oil of Indiana eased a shade.

Newmont and Hiram Walker also showed minor recessions.

Natomas Co. conceded a fraction after its sharp rise of the previous session, while the new stock (when issued) finished unchanged in an active turnover.

Transfers approximated 186,000 shares compared with 232,000 for yesterday.

New York, March 23.—Under a rearrangement of production quotas by the Cuban Export Corporation the larger American sugar mills operating in Cuba have received an increase in their quotas totaling 150,853 bags, according to a cable received by Lamborn & Co.

The Cuba Cane Products Co. received under the rearrangement an increase of 60,723 bags to 1,629,269 bags, the Cuban-American Sugar Co. 51,189 to 977,522 bags, the Cuba Co. 21,149 bags to 331,135 bags, and the Manati Sugar Co 17,792 bags to 278,557 bags.

Wool Market Quiet; Prices Turn Easier

Boston, March 23 (AP).—The Commercial Bulletin of Boston will say:

"The wool market has continued listless again this week and prices are hardly so strong; in fact, there have been some sales of wool, tops and yarns at less money, although business has not been general.

"In the West there has been little done. Growers are mostly unwilling to accept the bids which dealers are willing to make. Such few purchases as have been made have been around 30 cents for the best wools.

"The piece goods markets still are dull and dispirited. Stocks in process are still very large and shipping instructions against these old contracts very low.

"Foreign markets are rather less active.

The Commercial Bulletin will publish the following quotations:

Spring Goods Sales Surging Above Quotas

Wholesalers' Gains Take Lead Over Business of Retailers.

New York, March 23 (AP).—Dun & Bradstreet said today that "reports received from all parts of the country this week reveal sales of Easter and spring goods surging above anticipated quotas."

"The average gain in retail sales over those of last year," stated the review, "is placed at 48 per cent, while in many instances the 1932 figures have been passed by 10 to 12 per cent.

"Because of the prevailing rising markets inventories have been doubled, as retailers are anticipating needs in advance of normal requirements.

"Wholesalers report even greater gains than retailers, and are expressing concern over the inability of manufacturers to supply some grades of the most popular types of merchandise, because of restrictions of operations by NRA provisions."

"The course of leading industrial indices," the agency said, "now is showing greater uniformity in reaching higher positions, production almost without exception being at definitely higher levels in comparisons with the same period last year."

Texas Oil Co. Net Loss Drops To $491,003

New York, March 23 (AP).—Earnings of the Texas Corporation in the final half of last year nearly offset a loss of approximately $11,-500,000 suffered in the first half, the 1933 report, issued today, discloses.

Net loss for the year amounted to $491,003, compared with loss of $2,161,840 in 1932. Low prices for crude oil and refined products during the first half accounted for the deficit in that period, the report stated.

National Dairy Products Corporation reports 1933 net profit of $7,051,-872, equivalent after preferred dividends to $1.01 a common share. In 1932 net income was $12,537,360, equal to $1.88 a common share.

Net sales were $231,196,979 last year against $252,654,452 in 1932. The December 31 balance sheet showed current assets of $56,408,689 and current liabilities of $17,046,939 compared, respectively, with $56,-053,517 and $16,373,152 at the end of 1932.

Kingsbury Breweries Co., in its first annual report reflecting operations since the return of legal beer, shows net profit for the year 1933, after all charges and provisions for taxes, of $413,930, equivalent to $1.40 per share on the outstanding capital stock. Total sales of beer and near beer for the year amounted $2,699,932 and gross profit totaled $1,217,223. A charge of $22,000 was made against the year's operations by lowering the valuation of a portion of the beer inventory as of December 31, 7933.

The board of directors of Columbia National Bank, of Washington, D. C., at its recent meeting declared a quarterly dividend of $1.50 per share, payable to stockholders of record March 31, 1934, on April 2, 1934.

Directors of American Maize-Products Co. have declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share on the preferred stock and a dividend of 25 cents on the common.

Both dividends are payable March 31 to stockholders of record March 27, 1934.

U. S. Dollar Holds Steady On Markets

(Associated Press.)

The recent advance of the European gold currencies against dollars was checked in yesterday's foreign exchange dealings.

Fresh uncertainty over the stability of the gold bloc currencies resulted from the resignation of the Swiss minister of finance, although the Swiss government said his resignation had "no influence whatsoever on the Swiss gold standard."

The dollar advanced 3¼ centimes in Paris to close at an equivalent of 6.60 cents, while in New York francs were later a minor fraction of a cent lower at 6.60¼ cents. Swiss francs, Belgian belgas and Dutch guilders were unchanged to slightly lower in New York.

In London the gold currencies moved within a narrow range, francs closing at 77.30 to the pound against Thursday's 77.40. The dollar was up a half cent in terms of sterling at the closing rate of 5.10⅝ to the pound. In New York sterling yielded ⅜ of a cent in later trading at $5.10¾.

The demand for gold in the London open market was light, approximately $1,533,000 changing hands at an equivalent of $34.76 a fine ounce, 2 pence lower than Thursday's price.

Smokeless Coal Men Get Labor Accord

New York, March 23 (AP).—Dow, Jones & Co. says the Smokeless Coal operators of West Virginia as a group are understood to have agreed with the United Mine Workers of America on a new contract for one year from April 1, the day on which the present contract expires.

It is understood, continues the report, that the new contract will call for payment of 46 cents an hour instead of 42 cents, and that the operators have agreed to the "check-off" system for the deduction of union dues from wages, to be turned over to the union.

It is said that a 7-hour day instead of an 8 is a question still under negotiation.

Wheat Values Change Little In Dull Session

Market Closes Unchanged To ⅜ Down; Other Grains Decline.

Chicago, March 23 (AP).—Churning within limits too narrow in most cases to pay Federal taxes on dealings, the wheat market came to a virtual standstill today.

With business dwindling at times to zero, wheat prices averaged lower, but the extreme range of quotations was barely ⅝ of a cent a bushel.

At one stage, the wheat pit was completely deserted, and the crowds of brokers stood idly by, awaiting developments regarding automobile labor troubles and as to stock exchange regulation by Congress.

Wheat Closes Draggy.

Wheat closed draggy, unchanged to ⅜ down as compared with yesterday's finish; corn, ¼ to ½ off; oats, at ⅛ to ¼ decline, and provision varying from 5 cents setback to a rise of 2 cents.

Various observers of grain trade conditions said that until uncertainty over the industrial outlook was out of the way, and more was known about 1934 new crop prospects, only relatively slight price changes in wheat need be looked for.

From the outset a downward tendency of wheat values predominated, and, in the main, was ascribed to curtailment of buying power, rather than to any pressure to sell. Industrial and legislative perplexities received chief attention as market factors.

Reports From Kansas.

Some notice was taken of reports from Wichita, Kans., that wheat fields adjacent were infested with green bugs, and that crop damage in places amounted to 50 per cent. Traders recalled that a major crop scare once resulted from widespread devastation caused by these insects, and that prices rose to such extent the period is still known as "the green bug year."

Among other matters that aroused more or less interest were reports of a probable 25 per cent wheat acreage reduction in Australia this fall. There were also advices that unofficial estimates of the 1934 Argentine exportable wheat surplus had been cut to 6,000,000 bushels smaller than last year and 34,000,000 less than in 1932.

Corn and oats prices sagged with wheat and as a result of slackness of shipping demand.

Paris-Berlin Trade Losing; 5 Nations Gain

Renewed decline was evident in French business last month, and the outlook remains uncertain with the financial situation still difficult.

German foreign trade in February continued the unfavorable balance of January, with imports of raw materials rising and export sales difficult.

No real improvement has occurred in The Netherlands, though employment conditions have improved slightly.

Austrian budget results for last year show a considerable deficit in the ordinary accounts and a still larger deficit in the extraordinary budget.

Egypt's foreign trade last year was considerably stronger than in 1932, owing to heavier cotton shipments.

Canadian business continues to gain, with employment recovering earlier seasonal losses; imports in February were exceptionally large.

Japanese business was seasonally dull during February, but the trend of textile exports was sharply upward; silk and rayon industries are depressed.

The rice market of French Indo-China was increasingly active last month.

The situation in the Philippines remains uncertain with a gain in copra prices offset by losses in abaca quotations.

Art Exhibitions Will Continue

Shows at Branch Libraries Have Been Widely Attended.

Exhibitions of paintings by Washington artists, which have been held at branch libraries throughout the city, will be continued for another month, Dr. George F. Bowerman, chief librarian of the Public Library, announced yesterday.

During March the exhibitions, which were sponsored by the Division of Art, District Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Samuel A. Swiggett, chairman, have met an enthusiastic reception. Club women in the Capital and from Maryland and Virginia have paid special visits to examine the paintsings.

"At a time like this, when the struggle for existence is uppermost in the minds of the majority of men and women, purely material interests take on an exaggerated importance," Dr. Bowerman said yesterday. "Art is in danger of being thrust into the background to await more propitious days. But the message which the expression of art conveys never was needed more."

Good Friday services, known as "Three Hours at the Cross," will be conducted at the Salvation Army Temple, 606 E street northwest next Friday.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY The Close Observer By Harry J. Tuthill

OH I WAS SO FRIGHTENED WHEN THOSE TWO MEN ASKED FOR BAXTER AND RAISED THEIR OILY VOICES IN THE HALL.
ONE OF THEM HAD A KNIFE.
I KNEW THEY WERE NO GOOD THE MOMENT I SAW THEM.
AS SOON AS I HEARD THEIR VOICES I KNEW THEY WERE THE SAME MEN WHO CAME TO THE OTHER HOUSE TO GET THAT POOR CHILD.
THE SHORT ONE GOT VERY TOUGH.
BOTH HAVE POLICE RECORDS. THE SHORT ONE HAS BEEN IN JAIL AND WAS A BAD PRISONER.
I'M SO WORRIED NOW ABOUT THE BOY. THOSE WICKED MEN TRYING TO GET HIM.
HOW DO YOU KNOW ABOUT THEM HAVING POLICE RECORDS, HERMAN?
BOTH KEPT THEIR HAT'S OVER THEIR EYES AND WERE UNEASY WHEN I LOOKED AT THEM CLOSELY.
VERY GOOD. AND ABOUT THE SMALL ONE BEING A BAD ACTOR?
I OBSERVED THAT BOTH HIS THUMBS WERE A PECULIAR SHAPE.... AND DEEPLY SCARRED. THAT, NO DOUBT, CAME FROM BEING STRUNG UP BY THE THUMBS IN SOME FOREIGN PRISON AS EXTRA PUNISHMENT.

Walt Mason, Himself

Visitors.

We're always glad when guests arrive, in groups of two, in blocks of five; their gracious presence cheers our hearts, and life's monotony departs. And for two days, and sometimes three, we are as happy as can be, and hope our pleasant guests will stay until six weeks have rolled away. But in two days or three we feel that visitors make small appeal; we love them dearly as before, but in the house they are a bore. There's Uncle James, he grabs and thumbs the daily paper when it comes, and we don't have a chance to read until it's worn and gone to seed. And Uncle William sleeps so late, and wants his breakfast dished at eight, when all the rest of us were fed while he was lying in his bed. When for a wash we are disposed, the bathroom door is always closed; Aunt Julia is established there, applying shampoo to her hair. Aunt Julia also has a pup that leaves the household wrong side up; it tears the cushions into strips and ruins costly pillowslips. The easy chair we like the best is always anchored by some guest. We love our visitors as well as when they rang the front door bell, but oh, it soothes the aching heart when they announce they must depart.

Former Deputy Again Arrested

One-Time Burgess Charged With Drunken Driving.

Frederick, Md., March 13 (Spl.).—Charged with driving while drunk, Frank O. Lowery, former deputy sheriff and at one time burgess of Myersville, was arrested yesterday by State Road Officer A. F. Anderson, and was released on $500 bail for a hearing. Lowery also was charged with passing a worthless check.

Last October he paid a $250 fine for failing to stop when his automobile killed a man west of Middletown.

Since then he was acquitted for driving while drunk, twice successfully defended before the commissioner of motor vehicles his right to an operator's license, and recently was deprived of his commission as deputy sheriff.

Wives Warned Family Spats Lead to Accidents on the Job

Railroad Manager Seeks Cooperation in New Safety Drive.

Hagerstown, Md., March 23 (Spl.).—Many years ago Southern Railway freight train No. 97 went off an embankment "on a mighty rough road between Lynchburg and Danville," Va. Some bard later immortalized the accident as "The Wreck of the Old 97." The last verse went something like this:

"Now, ladies, take warning
From this time and all;
Never speak harsh words to your true-lovin' husband;
He may leave you and never return."

Today Charles W. Brown, vice president and general manager of the Western Maryland Railroad Co., announced the formation of a safety department. He said:

"Family quarrels are conducive to accidents. Many railroad accidents have been found due to a wife sending her husband to work in the morning in a bad mood after a 'spat.'"

And Mr. Brown appealed to the wives of Western Maryland Railroad employes to forego the "spats" and send their husbands to work in a good frame of mind if they want to help avoid accidents.

John R. Tenney, of Hagerstown, has been named supervisor of the new safety department. He recently returned from a survey of safety methods used on other railroads.

Authorization to borrow $1,500 to meet obligations was granted by the stockholders.

All white physicians of Jefferson County were named as a hospital medical board, with provisions for election from this group of a committee to confer with hospital authorities.

Reorganization of a citizens auxiliary for the hospital was discussed, with Rebecca M. Trapnell and Margaret P. Chew appointed as an investigating committee.

Roanoke, Va., March 23 (Spl.).—Engineers and highway officials from Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee, and several Federal officials left Roanoke today for a survey of possible routes for the proposed park-to-park highway connecting the Shenandoah and Smoky Mountain National Parks, following a breakfast with Chamber of Commerce members.

Those in the party included George L. Radcliffe, of Baltimore, regional PWA director; H. J. Spelman, highway engineer, Bureau of Public Roads, Washington; T. C. Vint, chief architect, Federal Parks Service; Gilmer Clark and Stanley W. Abbott, landscape architects; Theodore Strouse, Baltimore, assistant PWA regional director; Henry G. Shirley, E. B. Merciful Robbed Farmer Offers to Return Thief's Gloves.

Webster Springs, W. Va., March 23 (Spl.).—Looting of his corn crib by a thief, perhaps hungry, touched the heart of O. S. Garner, Buck Run farmer, instead of arousing his ire.

Five bushels of fine corn were carried away by the thief, who, in his haste, left a pair of warm gloves behind. Believing the man may need the gloves, Garner placed the following advertisement in a county newspaper:

"Found—Pair of gloves, in corn crib. Owner may have same by calling on O. S. Garner, of Buck Run."

"If the man needs the corn worse than I do," Garner says, "he probably needs the gloves, too, and he can have them and no questions asked if he will call for them."

Berkeley Plans Gardens Again As Needy Relief

Will Repeat Last Year's Program, Advancing Varied Seeds.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 23 (Spl.).—The Berkeley County Welfare Board is planning subsistence gardens during the coming growing months much as last year.

The board and Administrator H. C. Brooks, with County Agent W. N. McClung, plan 1,100 gardens for the county's needy. Garden seeds will be furnished with fertilizer to those on relief rolls or proving their need, but the recipients must work out the charge for this on welfare or CWA projects.

About 1,000 bushels of seed potatoes and 1,200 packages of garden seeds, each package containing a sufficient variety for a continuous summer garden, will be ordered.

Last year the bill for seeds and fertilizer for the subsistence gardens was $2,500, and this year's supply will cost more.

On last year's 1,100 gardens, $25,000 worth of food was grown, for an average cost per garden of $20, and a cost of seed and fertilizer of $2 per garden. The ratio of $10 return for each $1 invested was highly satisfying to those in charge.

A closer tab will be kept this year on those who would cook or sell the seed, which happened in some cases last year.

First Rum Seized Under New Law

Norfolk Police Learn Act Is "Tricky."

Norfolk, Va., March 23 (Spl.).—Police seized 12 quarts of whisky in a house here in the first raid conducted on a search warrant under the new Virginia alcoholic beverage control act.

Instead of immediate confiscation an automatic continuance of ten days is called for under the provisions of the A. B. C. act. The new law also requires that a notice be posted on the door of the raided premises, telling of the seizure.

On the tenth day the case is called in police court and if occupants of the premises or owners of the liquor do not appear, the whisky is confiscated by the State.

$500,000 in New Homes Planned

Waynesboro's Program Totals $3,500,000.

Waynesboro, Va., March 23 (AP).—Need of at least a $500,000 home-building program this year in Waynesboro was revealed today by publication of the results of a survey made among 1,367 employes of the Du Pont Rayon Co., Stehli Silks Corporation and the Crompton Shenandoah Co.

The survey shows a shortage of homes now, and Du Pont plans to start within a month or six weeks construction of an additional rayon plant here that will bring at least 225 new families into the community, in addition to between 1,600 and 1,800 construction workers this fall.

The Du Pont addition will cost about $3,000,000, and is to be completed early in 1935. Waynesboro had about 3,500 people in 1920, 6,200 in 1930, and at the present time about 8,000.

Whether the town of Woodstock could hold a separate town election this year presents an interesting question, as local officials, including the mayor, councilmen and treasurer, are to be elected. County officers are elected next year.

Hospital Near As Hagerstown Gets Legacy

Hagerstown, Md., March 23 (Spl.).—Hagerstown's new hospital will be built without Government assistance at a cost of $400,000, it was announced today by the board of trustees of the Washington County Hospital.

The Public Works Administration last week rejected an application by the board for a loan and grant to construct a fireproof building, because the local institution is not a public one. The PWA, however, offered to loan the board the amount.

The hospital board, however, decided not to take advantage of the offer but will use part of a million dollar legacy from the late S. M. Bloom, which becomes available in October.

Wards, operating room and other departments will be housed in the new six-story fireproof building, while the present building will be used for offices and a health center for the city and county. Plans will permit building to start in midsummer. Work for nine months for 200 skilled and unskilled workers will be provided by the project.

Court Holds Free Current Agreement Can Not Be Enforced.

Woodstock, Va., March 23 (Spl.).—A damage suit brought by Walter Fravel against the Virginia Public service Co. for $21,000 was dismissed by Judge Philip Williams of the Shenandoah Circuit Court.

Fravel claimed the company refused to carry out a contract made by its predecessor to furnish electric current free to Fravel in lieu of paying damages occasioned by the construction of a dam across the Shenandoah River, adjoining the plaintiff's farm.

The court held that the furnishing of electricity was subject to regulations made by the State corporation commission and that the plaintiff could not recover damages for the failure of the company to furnish it to him free.
